WIVES AND CHILDREN OF AMERICANS TAKEN FROM HAITIAN PORTS

Mob of 2,000 Menaces Small Outpost at the Town of Chantel.

CRUISER GALVESTON ARRIVES AT JACMEL

U. S. Women Embark on Steamer Martinique at Aux Cayes.

GENERAL REPORTS ORDER IS RESTORED

Populace Is Heartened by Dispatch of Marine Reinforcements.

(Associated Press.)

Reports of serious conditions in Haiti continued to reach Washington last night as 500 United States Marines moved toward the island republic to assist the 700 already there in maintaining peace.

The cruiser Galveston, which was requested by Brig. Gen. John H. Russell, the American high commissioner in Haiti, to assist the Marines, arrived yesterday in Jacmel, 20 miles from Port au Prince, the capital, to evacuate American women and children.

A gathering of the largest body of malcontents yet reported to the State Department was indicated in a telegram received late yesterday from Gen. Russell, who said that Saturday morning a crowd of about 2,000 surrounded the outpost building at Chantel crying, "Down with Borno, down with Freeman."

Borno Is Head of Republic.

The "Borno" referred to by the crowd is the president of the republic. The State Department said it was unable to identify the person referred to as "Freeman" who was decried by the gathering.

The Aux Cayes district was the scene of the first bloodshed in the situation, which grew out of a strike in October of college students who objected to a decrease in the school's appropriations to care for other needs of the institution.

The State Department's report on the incident was as follows:

"On the morning of December 7 a crowd of about 2,000 surrounded the outpost building at Chantel, yelling, 'Down with Borno, down with Freeman.' The garde, assisted by the French priest, held the crowd off. Chantel is in the Aux Cayes district and has a garde outpost of three men.

Mob Threatened Corporal.

"At Corbek, near Aux Cayes, where there is another outpost, a crowd estimated at 1,000 gathered on the morning of December 7 and threatened to kill the corporal of the garde, who was alleged to have telephoned into Aux Cayes the approach of the mob that descended on Aux Cayes on the afternoon of December 6. The crowd had been shouting 'Down with Borno, down with Freeman,' but had not attacked the garde. Directions have been issued to call in the above two small outposts to Aux Cayes in order to prevent rushing the outpost at night and the capture of rifles and ammunition.

"The telephone line between Aux Cayes and Port-Priment was being destroyed.

"American women and children at Aux Cayes embarked on the steamer Martinique, of the Columbian Line, for Port au Prince. The Martinique was to stop at Jeremie and pick up about five American women and children at that port."

Investigation Is Removed.

Virtually at the moment the President sent his special message to Congress urging approval of a commission to investigate the situation in Haiti, the Foreign Policy Association issued a report demanding an investigation of the problems in the republic.

The special message of the President was read in the House Saturday and shortly after Chairman Porter, of its foreign affairs committee, introduced a resolution to create the commission requested by Mr. Hoover. It can not be acted upon by the committee, however, until late next week, when the House completes organization of its committees. The Senate was not in session Saturday and has not formally received the message.

The People's Lobby, headed by Prof. John Dewey, issued a statement last night characterizing the sending of additional Marines to Haiti as "superfluous evidence of the complete breakdown of our protected policy of financial and economic imperialism in the Caribbean area and elsewhere."

Protest Sending of Marines.

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Protest against sending of Marines to Haiti was voiced in a resolution adopted today by the Southern Conference of the International Labor Defense, left wing labor organization affiliated with the Communist party of the United States.

The resolution declared President Hoover's action in sending additional Marines to Haiti was "merely another capitalistic attempt to crush a strike by the use of troops."

Some 50 or 60 persons attended the conference. Officials of the organization asserted delegates represented organized labor in Virginia, the two Carolinas and Georgia.

Brookhart Dry Talk Raps Courts, Mellon

Iowa Senator Asserts Penalties Will Relieve Congested Dockets and Censures Secretary on Eve of Expected Grand Jury Report.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, whose statements on the floor of the Senate brought the present grand jury investigation of the "Wall street party in the Willard Hotel," yesterday leveled a broadside at the Federal courts and Secretary Andrew W. Mellon of the Treasury Department, in speaking before an Antisaloon League meeting in the Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

The senator charged the Federal courts with laxity in prohibition enforcement and censured Secretary Mellon concerning the issuance of domestic liquor-production permits and border patrol work.

During the investigation of the "Wall street party," Senator Brookhart appeared before the grand and testified in detail concerning the party at which, he stated, liquor was served. The grand jury is expected to report today. Whether it plans to return an indictment is problematical, but since today is the last date on which such an indictment could be returned it is considered highly probable that it will do so.

The dinner which Senator Brookhart exploited was given at the Willard Hotel on December 10, 1926. Therefore, in order to get under the three-year statutory limit in the District, an indictment, if any, must be returned before midnight.

When a Federal court's docket is overloaded with liquor cases, Senator Brookhart told the Antisaloon meeting, it is evident that the court is failing to do its duty.

"If a court will impose the proper penalties," he declared, "its docket will soon be unburdened."

Declaring that many Federal judges should be impeached, the senator stated that if some one else did not do so, he would call upon the Attorney General to make a survey of the way they handle liquor cases.

ACTION IS DUE THIS WEEK ON DISTRICT BILLS

Senate Committee Meets Soon to Consider All New Proposals.

HOUSE BOARD IS ONLY HALF-ORGANIZED YET

TEXTBOOKS MEASURE FOREMOST ON AGENDA

Pay Increase for Firemen and Police Is Also to Be Discussed.

The legislative program for the District will begin to take form this week when the Senate District committee holds its first meeting of the long session.

Chairman Capper has called the meeting, which will be held the middle of the week, to consider bills which have been introduced, and to decide on a course of action with regard to the new traction mreger proposal.

Among the bills to be considered is one to provide free textbooks for high school students and one to increase the pay of policemen and firemen. Early in the week Capper will introduce his bill for a new center market, so the prospect is that this, too, will be taken up.

Senate Committee Organized.

Although there is now a vacancy, the Senate District committee is organized and ready to proceed with business. The vacancy was caused when Senator Jones (Republican), of Washington, became chairman of the appropriations committee.

The House District committee, however, is as yet only half organized. The seven Democrats who will serve on it were named last week, but the fourteen Republicans who will dominate it are yet to be appointed. They probably will be selected this week, and the prospect is that Representative Zihlman, of Maryland, again will be designated chairman.

Senator Sackett (Republican), of Kentucky, who is chairman of a subcommittee that is investigating charges against the local government contained in the Blease resolution, evidently does not expect to call another meeting until after the new year.

Policy of Delay Upheld.

The investigation was unsavory to Sackett and the others and at least three other members of the subcommittee from the beginning, and subsequent developments have convinced them that their policy of delay was a wise one.

Sackett and Senators Jones and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, insisted that they would not inquire into the McPherson case until it had been threshed out at the

CHRISTMAS BOX BOMB KILLS BOY AND TWO GIRLS

Lured by Gay Wrapping, Child Lifts It and Sets Off Blast.

ABSENT FATHER GETS GRILLING ON RETURN

Domestic Troubles and Threatening Letters Will Be Aired.

MOTHER, TWO OTHER YOUNGSTERS ESCAPE

Brooklyn Home Blown Out of Shape by Blast, Rocking Whole Neighborhood.

New York, Dec. 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A bomb wrapped like a Christmas package and crammed with dynamite and jagged steel lay on the kitchen table in the home of a Brooklyn workingman this morning.

Three little Italian children stumbled sleepily into the cold room. Their dark eyes grew big when they saw the "Christmas package." One of them picked it up. It went off and blew the three children to pieces.

The house is in the Ridgewood section. It was the home of Joseph Falzone and his wife and five children. Mrs. Jenny Falzone, the wife, and two children escaped death. Two of the other children were instantly killed and the third died later in the hospital.

The small stucco house bulged crazily from the dynamite blast, which rocked the neighborhood. Policemen groping through the fumes found the bodies of Mary, 15, and Philip, 13. Five-year-old Rose was dying. Mrs. Jenny Falsone, 3-year-old Sally and little Pasquale, 8, were safe but half crazy with fear in the front bedroom.

Father Returns From Hunt.

The police do not know who placed the bomb in the kitchen or why. Two letters threatening Falzone were found in the wreckage. These threats were not news to the detectives for they had done something in the way of investigating them.

Joseph Falzone is a marble cutter and worked in the Columbia Marble Works in Brooklyn. Last Thursday morning he left home to be gone several days on a hunting trip in Pennsylvania. He was, presumably, far away when the explosion occurred, and a search for him was begun at once.

At 9:30 tonight he opened the front door and walked into his home again, to find three of his children dead and police waiting to question him. Detectives took him at once to the Wilson Avenue Station, and he was closeted there tonight with District Attorney Charles J. Dodd.

UNITED STATES FIXES SIGNATURE TO WORLD COURT TREATY TODAY

Italy Names Agents To Naval Conference

Chief Interest Centered on Negotiations With Paris.

Rome, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The Italian delegation to the five-power conference in London next month, unless there are eleventh hour changes, will be composed of Foreign Minister Grandi, Admiral Sirianni, minister of the navy; Admiral Acton, who participated in the Washington naval conference, and Ambassador Bordanaro, whose post is at London.

There will be numerous advisers and experts, among them Minister Plenipotentiary Augusto Rosso, formerly counsellor of the Washington Embassy, Capt. Ruspoli, who also participated in the Washington conference.

Chief interest now is centered in the negotiations between Rome and Paris attempting to reach a preliminary agreement in order that the two Latin countries may present a united front at the London meeting.

The Italian foreign ministry does not intend for the present to break off negotiations, but the French attitude was described as such as to render ultimate agreement difficult unless the viewpoint of the Quai D'Orsay is changed.

Italian policy in the matter of limitation of armaments remains the

SENATE RATIFICATION IS FINAL FORMALITY

EXECUTIVE LETTERS ON PACT PUBLISHED

Little Chance That Congress Will Fail to Ratify Protocol.

President Hoover announced through the State Department last night that the signature of the United States will be formally affixed today to the protocol of the World Court. Thus but one more step remains to complete American membership in the permanent international tribunal created under the League of Nations, but independent of it.

The last step will be Senate ratification of the formula devised by Elihu Root modifying the reservations the Senate attached when on January 27, 1926, it voted, 76 to 17, to have the United States become a full-fledged member of the court. Though the irreconcilibles will make a last stand against the court, they admit their lack of strength to block the final step.

Hoover said in his message he would submit the Root plan to the Senate at a convenient moment. The present is deemed inconvenient since injection of the issue now might add fresh complications to the Senate tangle over the tariff.

Letter Made Public.

In announcing the formality of signing the protocol, the State Department made public President Hoover's letter to Secretary of State Stimson, dated November 26, authorizing Jay Pierrepont Moffat, American charge d'affaires at Berne, to sign for the United States, and also made public Stimson's eight-page letter to the President, dated November 18, surveying the history of the court and the conditions upon which the United States proposes to become a member.

Hoover's message emphasized that entry into the court is not the "slightest step toward entry into the League of Nations." Mr. Stimson's letter makes the same point and declares that, aside from costing upward of $35,000 a year as this country's share in the expenses of the court, the only changes involved in the staus of the United States is a suitor before the court are these:

"If we join the court we shall be admitted, under the protocol of adherence, to participate on an equality with the other signatory states in the election of judges of the court. We should also be assured that no amendment of the charter of the court could be made without our consent.

Would Resume Leadership.

"Far exceeding the weight of these legal considerations, by joining the court the United States would resume its time-honored place of leadership in the great movement for the judicial settlement of international controversies, and in the future, through its representatives and jurists, exercise its proper influence in the development of the kind of court which our representatives proposed to The Hague conference more than 30 years ago."

Mr. Stimson pointed out that The Hague Court, created in 1899, is not a permanent tribunal with a regularly constituted set of judges. Roosevelt sought to make it that kind of court in 1907(but the effort failed, owing to the inability of the nations

Capital Group Hears Initial Use of Wireless Phone by Sea Vessels.

BRITTEN HEARD ON SHIP

Washington played an important role in inauguration of the first regular wireless telephone service between vessels at sea and shore, launching this new form of communication between the liner Leviathan and Bell system subscribers, yesterday, when prominent members of the House of Representatives and Government officials at the Capitol heard conversations from the same rom and from New York with the ship.

This latest innovation opened with an exchange of felicitations between Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which wil lmaintal nthe service, and Commodore H. A. Cunningham, senior ranking office of the American Merchant Marine, who was aboar dthe ships whiel it was Europe-bound about 200 miles off the Atlantic coast at noon.

At the same time, members of the Washington group sat in a room at the Capitol, and with receivers at their ears heard this initial conversation, and listened in on a brief conversation between Commodore Cunnngham and one of their number, Rrepresentative Fred A. Britten, of Illinois, chairman of the House naval affairs committee.

Gathered about Representative Britten at the same time were Assistant Secretary of Commerce Julius Klein, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, U. S. Navy, Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations, U. S. Navy, Representative Wallace H. 72 DIE IN SEA FIGHT; U.S. WOMEN ON SHIP

60 Chinese on British Vessel Plunge to Death When Pirates Open Fire.

ONE OFFICER IS KILLED

Hongkong, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Three American women were witnesses today of a bloody conflict between a swarm of Chinese pirates and the crew of the British steamship Haicheng. The women, whose names had not been learned tonight, were not injured, but twelve persons were killed and about 60 native passengers leaped overboard and drowned.

The steamer reached here tonight with its superstructure partly burned away and one officer dead and another wounded. Thirty-eight wounded buccaneers were sent to the hospital, where the condition of most of them was said to be serious. Others were brought ashore, securely bound, and thrown into jail. The ship was under escort by the British destroyers Birdar and Sterling, which had gone to its aid.

The Haicheng left Swatow for this city yesterday afternoon with 300 passengers, including an Englishman and the three American women. Early this morning 20 or 30 of the pirates, who had shipped as passengers, sprang upon the decks with bloodcurdling yells and attempted to seize the ship. They stormed the bridge, firing revolvers indiscriminately.

The bridge, however, was protected by barbed wire and the officers and Indian guards opened fire on the outlaws. A rapid exchange of shots forced the pirates to retire, although the had killed Third Officer Woodward.

After a brief lull in the combat, the Pirates again charged the bridge, but the accurate fire of the officers and guards picked off the leaders, and when they again withdrew they left dead and wounded lying about the deck. No other frontal attack was made, but the Pirates took up protected positions from which they did much sniping. An Indian guard

Volcano Top 3-Year Home for Scientists

Washington Couple Lived in Corrugated Iron House in Sun Blistered Southwest Africa Checking Variations in Sun's Heat.

For three years home was a corrugated iron house on top of a sunblistered solitary mountain in an arid country for W. A. Hoover, their 4-year-old daughter and Fred A. Greely, a fellow scientist, who have just returned to Washington from South West Africa.

Killing a charging leopard with a 22-caliber rifle, says Hoover, was the most exciting adventure of their lonely post. The ringhals cobra incident was a close second. The cobra spit poison in Hoover's face.

Mr. Hoover was field leader of the National Georgraphic Society expedition in cooperation with the Smithsonian Institution to establish a solar radiation observatory on top of Mount Brukkaros, a dead volcano of South West Africa.

Betty, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover's daughter, was 1" years old when they went out to establish the observatory. Now she is 4. A flock of chickens and a cow were her only playmates for three years.

The Hoovers and Greely were relieved by Louis C. Sordahl and Mrs. Sordahl and A. G. Frolland, who arrived at Mount Brukkaros to carry on the work of "shooting the sun" six times a day.

The work of the expedition was to set up an observatory which would make reports similar to those made by Smithsonian Institution solar observatories in Chile and at Table Mountain, Calif. The three observatories on three continents are reporting daily variations in the heat of the sun that reaches the earth. Every activity on the face of the earth is dependent on the sun's radiation, the variation of which is the subject of this study.

While individuals are only conscious of such variations in radiation as the earth itself brings about through the procession of the seasons, evidence of the variation in the strength of the sun itself is not far to seek. Smithsonian authorities hink there is a definite connection between variation in solar radiation and changes of weather. The observatory Hoover established on Mount Brukkaros, Southwest Africa, may some day help warn Chicago of a coming drop in temperature.

At Brukkaros the Hoover party lived 2,000 feet up a mountainside and 61 miles from a grocery store. The nearest white man, a German missionary, lived 8 miles away. Their nearest neighbors were Hottentots, whose beehive houses dotted the plain. Because the observatory stands within a Hottentot reservation, Hoover had to get permission to hunt springbok from the local chief of the Hottentots, who is known as captain.

Isolated on a dry ountain, surrounded by African natives, the expedition was nevertheless in constant touch with civilization. The government of southwest Africa, which built

CHINESE IS SOUGHT AS COUNTERFEITER

Source of Bogus $50 Bills Found When Hotel Man Spots Bad Note.

SECRET SERVICE IS BUSY

Secret Service agents of the United States Treasury Department are quietly conducting an extensive search here for a Chinese counterfeiter, believed to be one of the first of his race ever to have been a member of a spurious money gang in the United States.

The tip went out from the inner offices of the Secret Service early last week to bring in the Chinese after he had passed four $50 counterfeit bills and had attempted to put out a fifth on a local hotel. Since that time, headquarters detectives of the Metropolitan Police Department and special agents have been combing the city in a search that thus far has failed to bear fruit.

The $50 bills are not believed to have been made here. They were described as "crude" and the fact that four of them got into circulation here is regarded as an example of carelessness on the part of cashiers.

The Chinese is described as being about 35 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, heavy set, and with a very dark complexion. He has a smooth face and was wearing a light brown suit with a gray fedora hat.

In each case he has acted with perfect assurance in passing his bogus money. He operates on the pretext that he has been unable to get the bill changed, and visits places where a $50 bill is no novelty.

J. T. Heare, manager of the Sterling Hotel, was one of his intended victims, and but for his curiosity the man might have fleeced him. The hotel manager was preparing to send the hotel receipts to the bank and had a large sum of paper money on the desk behind the cashier's cage.

The Chinese entered, saw the money, and immediately asked for change for $50. Heare glanced up

FUEL PLANE FALLS; TWO FLIERS PERISH

Record-Seekers in Smash-Up 15 Minutes After Crash of "Servant" Ship.

TWO OTHERS ARE KILLED

Tampa, Fla., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Two pilots of a refueling ship to an endurance plane were killed here this morning as their craft crashed in a take-off with 80 gallons of fuel for the other plane, which about 15 minutes later was forced down, causing minor injuries to both its occupants.

E. A. Dempsey and Stanley Smith, of St. Louis, were burned to death in the refueling plane which caught fire as it crashed.

R. W. Schrock, of St. Louis, and Leonard Carrothers, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, suffered minor injuries as they attempted a forced landing with the endurance plane The Sealdswest of Florida near Kissimmee, Fla., in a fog.

Airport authorities were unable to explain the cause of the refueling ship's crash.

The endurance plane was practically out of gas when the refueling ship took off to replenish it and the pilots after seeing the crash sought pilots failing to secure a new supply, sought unsuccessfully to bring their craft to earth, but crashed into a woods. The endurance plane took fire, but Carothers and Shrock were able to crawl to safety.

The endurance plane took off yesterday at 9:50 a. m. for the ninth time to seek a new refueling endurance mark. Numerous minor difficulties had caused the pilots to land on previous attempts, but after more than 23 hours in the air, the ship seemed to be flying perfectly.

After the refueling plane fell, two plans from St. Petersburg and four from Tampa scourced this section without success in search of the endurance plane. A Coast Guard boat also was sent out from St. Petersburg

Seven Bandits Hold Up 50 At Business Men's Banquet

$1,300 Cash and $2,000 in Jewelry Taken at Dinner Party.

New York, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Seven robbers today held up and robbed a dinner party of 50 Bronx business men, attorneys and others, including a magistrate, a former magistrate and a detective. The robbers escaped with about $1,300 in cash and more than $2,000 in jewelry.

Magistrate Albert H. Vitale, in whose honor the dinner was being given, was in the midst of a speech when the robbers entered unostentatiously. As the magistrate finished speaking, the leader of the robbers, who had a handkerchief over the lower part of his face, drew two revolvers and ordered the 50 men to hand over their money.

Detective Arthur Johnson reached for his service revolver, but at Magistrate Vitale's counsel he and two

San Francisco, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Charles J. Ferguson, Army warrant officer, whose ambition has been to span the Golden Gate in a motorless glider, was hurled to his death late today when the machine, towed by an airplane, nosed up into a cross-current.

As a private airplane towed Ferguson and his glider from Crissy Field, his safety strap broke and the glider pilot was hurled head first from his contrivance.

Thousands of persons, watching the attempt, gasped as his body shot downward. Ferguson twisted in the air and struck the ground feet first with terrific force.

An ambulance, held ready in case of an accident, was near the place where he fell and his body was to agree on the method of selecting judges. The world court realizes that desire for a permanent international judicial body—one that is now regarded by the Hoover administration as of vital importance in the light of the Kellogg antiwar treaty.

Ever since the Senate adopted five reservations affecting American entry into the court the spotlight has been on the fifth and last one, to which many of the other powers objected. This fifth reservation stipulated that the court should not render any advisory opinion "touching any dispute or quetaion in which the United States has or claims an interest." The four other reservations were relatively unimportant and were accepted by the other powers.

Four Other Provisions.

They provided that the United States (1) assumed no legal relation to the league or Versailles treaty; (2) should be on an equal footing with the league council and assembly in electing judges of the court; (3) would bear its share of the expenses; (4) might withdraw from the court at any time, and that the statute should not be amended without the consent of the United States.

When the terms of American entry came before league council at Geneva in March, 1926, Sir Austen Chamberlain objected that reservation five might "hamper the world of the council and prejudice the rights of the league," and suggested a conference with the United States to clarify and interpret that reservation.

Secretary Kellogg refused to enter a conference of signatories called for September 1, 1926. He insisted that the American reservations were "clear and unequivocal." The conference balked at the fifth reservation. The situation hung fire until, prodded by the Gillette (Republican, Massachusetts) resolution, President Coolidge and Mr. Kellogg in February, of this year, invoked the aid of Elihu Root. He was semiofficially delegated to attend a meeting of a committee of jurists coincident with the league council last March. There Root solved the problem by a so-called formula under which articles 4 and 5 of the protocol of signature read as follows:

Text of Root Formula.

"Article 4—The court shall render advisory opinions in public session after notice and opportunity for hearing substantially as provided in the new existing articles 73 and 74 of the rules of court.

"Article 5—With a view to insuring that the court shall not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest, the secretary general of the League of Nations shall, through any channel designated for that purpose by the United States, inform the United States of any proposal before the council or the assembly of the league for obtaining an advisory opinion from theh court, and thereupon, if desired, an exchange of views as to whether an interest of the United States is affected shall proceed with all convenient speed between the council or the assembly of the league and the United States."

The protocol then provides that:

"Whenever a request for an advisory opinion comes to the court, the registrar shall notify the United States thereof * * * stating a reasonable time limit fixed by the president within which a written statement by the United States concerning the request will be received. If for any reason no sufficient opportunity for an exchange of views upon such a request should have been afforded and the United States advises the court that the question upon which the opinion of the court is asked is one that affects the interests of the United States, the proceedings shall be stayed for a period sufficient to enable such an exchange of views between the council or the assembly and the United States to take place."

HOOVER-STIMSON LETTERS ON COURT

The State Department last night made public the following information regarding signing of the World Court agreement:

The Charge d'Affaires ad interim of the United States at Berne, Jay Pierrepont Moffat, has been authorized by the President and will sign today on behalf of the United States:

1. The protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

2. The protocol of accession of the United States of America to the protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, and

3. The protocol of revision of the statute of the Premanent Court of International Justice.

Attached is the exchange of correspondence between the President and the Secretary of State on the subject, which is self-explanatory.

HOOVER REPLY TO SECRETARY

Washington, D. C.

"My Dear Mr. Secretary:

"1. The protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

"2. The protocol of accession of the United States of America to the protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

"3. The protocol of revision of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

"For this purpose, I am inclosing the full powers authorizing Mr. Jay Pierrepont Moffat, charge d'affaires ad interim of the United States at Berne, to sign these documents.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Signed) HERBERT HOOVER."

STIMSON GIVES COURT REVIEW

"November 18, 1929.

"The President,
"The White House.

"My Dear Mr. President:

"There is now awaiting our decision the question of whether this Government shall sign the protocol of adherence to the statute of the world court, on the conditions set out in the resolution of the United States Senate of January 27, 1926, as this resolution was accepted by the recent protocol of September 14, 1929, now open for signature in Geneva. Closely involved in this decision is the question whether the United States shall also sign the protocol revising the statute of the world court, also dated September 14, 1929, and also open for signature at Geneva. This latter protocol provides for certain amendments to the charter statute of the court which have an important bearing upon the question of adherence. Practically all of the nations which are signatories to the world court have already signed these protocols, during the past few weeks in which they have been open for signature, 50 nations having signed the former and 49 the latter. The only nations which have not signed the former to date are Albania, Costa Rica, Ethiopia, and Lithuania.

"A brief summary of the considerations involved in this question seems advisable.

"For over half a century the United States has taken a leading part in promoting the judicial settlement of international disputes. Not only have its citizens been prominent in advocating such settlement as a substitute for war, but the Government itself has participated in many important arbitrations, and our Presidents, as well as our foreign ministers, have frequently acted as arbitrators in such disputes between other nations.

American Delegation Active.

"In 1899, the American delegation to the first Hague conference was active in securing the establishment of the so-called Permanent Court of Arbitration, which still exists and in which we are members. Our Government, under Mr. Roosevelt, submitted to that body its first case, a controversy between the United States and Mexico.

"This so-called court, however, was but a step in the direction proposed by the American delegation. It is not constituted as a real court, holding regular meetings and sessions. It is a mere panel or list of about 150 names of gentlemen who have been selected by the member states as qualified and available to sit as arbiters in any dispute which may be submitted to them. Whenever a controversy is desired to be referred to it, the arbitrators who are to sit are selected by the parties, are called out from their private lives, and the case is then referred to them.

"In 1907, the American delegates to the second Hague conference were instructed by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Root to work for the development of this court of arbitration into a permanent tribunal composed of judges who are judicial officers and nothing else, who are paid adequate salaries, who have no other occupation, and who are devoting their entire time to the trial and decision of international cases by judicial methods and under a sense of judicial responsibility.'

Established in 1920.

"Owing to difficulties in agreeing upon the method of selecting the judges, they were unsuccessful then; but such a court was finally established in 1920 under the name of the Permanent Court of International Justice, commonly referred to as the World Court. Its charter was framed by a group of distinguished jurists in which the United States was represented; and it is interesting to remember that the difficulty which had prevented the establishment of the court in 1907 was solved by the suggestion of the American member, Mr. Root, based upon the analogy of a precedent in the creation of our own Federal Constitution, the so-called Connecticut compromise.

"Although this final movement which established the court was initiated by the League of Nations, the court took its existence and became effective not by the action of the league but under a statute and protocol separately signed by over 50 States, not all of whom are league members. It thus owes its existence to the independent authority of those signatory States.

"This court has now been in existence for over eight years. It has rendered sixteen judgments in controverted cases and has also delivered sixteen advisory opinions on questions which have been submitted to it. Several of these judgments have been rendered in cases which were of great importance and in which bitter international controversies had existed. Both the judgments and the advisory opinions have rendered important service in settling such controversies and thus in preserving peace. Confidence in the court has so developed that its business is rapidly increasing, and one of the chief purposes of the proposed amendments of its charter statute above mentioned is to provide for more continuous sessions and in other respects to increase the importance and efficiency of the tribunal.

For Dispute References.

"Unless a State has signed the so-called 'optional clause' granting to the court compulsory jurisdiction over it in certain classes of legal disputes (which is not proposed in the present protocol that the United States shall sign), the court can take jurisdiction only over cases which the parties themselves refer to it. It has no power to draw an unwilling suitor before it, even if that suitor be a signatory of the court, and render judgment in respect to such suitor. The court simply stands ready and available as a carefully chosen and experienced tribunal to which the nations of the world, if and when they choose, can refer their disputes for settlement, without the ordinary delays and difficulties which accompany the selection of arbitrators.

"Under the terms of the original charter of the court, the United States is already a competent suitor to appear before it. The only obligation which we would assume by joining the court is one which we ourselves have asked for in the Senate reservations, namely, that we should pay our appropriate share of the expenses of its maintenance. I am informed that the largest contribution by any State has been but little more than $35,000 a year; and, although these expenses will be slightly increased in the future by an increase in the number and salaries of the judges, this obligation in any event will be comparatively trivial.

"The only other changes in our present status as suitor which would be effected by our joinder would be to give us new rights and privileges. If we join the court, we shall be admitted, under the protocol of adherence, to participate on an equality with other signatory states in the election of the judges of the court. We should also be assured that no amendment of the charter of the court could be made without our consent.

Resolution Was Passed.

"Far exceeding the weight of these legal considerations, by joining the court the United States would resume its time-honored place of leadership in the great movement for the judicial settlement of international controversies, and in the future, through its representatives and jurists, exercise its proper influence in the development of the kind of court which our representatives proposed to The Hague Conference more than 30 years ago.

"These considerations were pointed out by my predecessor, Mr. Hughes, in his letter to President Harding on February 17, 1923, advising adherence to the court. On February 24, 1923, President Harding presented to the Senate the proposal of adhesion. On March 3, 1925, a resolution was passed by the House of Representatives stating that it desired 'to express its cordial approval of the said court and an earnest desire that the United States give early adherence to the protocol establishing the same, and expressing its readiness to participate in the enactment of such legislation as would necessarily follow such approval.

"On January 27, 1926, the Senate gave its advice and consent to adherence to the court upon five reservations. As to the first four of these reservations, no objection has been raised by any of the other signatories of the court, and they are accepted in toto in the proposed protocol of adherence now before us.

"The fifth reservation related to advisory opinions and was as follows:

"'5. That the court shall not render any advisory opinion except publicly after due notice to all states adhering to the court and to all interested states and after public hearing or opportunity for hearing given to any state concerned; nor shall it without the consent of the United States entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest.'

"As to the first half of this reservation, article four of the protocol of adherence now open for signature provides:

"'The court shall render advisory opinions in public session after notice and opportunity for hearing, substantially as provided in the now existing articles 73 and 74 of the rules of the court.'

"These rules provide for public hearings by the court and advisory opinions after notice to all member states or states admitted to appear before the court (which would cover the case of the United States whether we adhered or not). They provide for an opportunity for argument on the part of all states notified or asking to be heard and for a public delivery of the opinion in open court.

"Furthermore, these rules will be incorporated into the charter statute of the court in the second protocol revising the original statute which, as I first pointed out in this letter, is also open for our signature. By thus incorporating these rules, they become irrepealable and permanent; and, therefore, if we adhere to the court, those provisions for notice and public hearing can not be withdrawn without our consent.

"By these provisions one of the chief dangers which has influenced American opinion in its objection to the rendering of advisory opinions by the court has been removed. America's fear lest the opinion of the court could be sought by some nations and rendered by the court in private, and that other nations might thus suddenly find their interests compromised by a decision of the court on a question in which they are involved, no longer has any foundation. The court in rendering advisory opinions must follow substantially the same procedure as is followed in controversies, or as they are termed in the rules of the court 'contentious cases.' It must act in public; it must give general notice of its proposed hearing, in order that any one who is interested may have an opportunity to be heard; and it must hear them.

Court Goes Further.

"But the court and the pending protocol go even further. In April, 1925, the court was requested to render an advisory opinion in respect to the effect of the treaty of peace between Finland and Russia in reference to the autonomy of Eastern Carolia. When this request came before the court in January, it was found that Russia, although notified of the pending hearing, refused to take any part in the proceedings. Thereupon the court refused to go forward with the matter or to render any advisory opinion, saying that it found it to be 'well established in international law that no State can without its consent be compelled to submit its dispute to other States, whether to mediation or to arbitration, or to any other means of pacific settlement * * * The court, being a court of justice, can not, even in giving advisory opinions, depart from the essential rules guiding their activities as a court.'

"By this ruling the court assimilated its practice in advisory opinions where a dispute was involved between any nations to the same rule provided by its charter to govern contentious cases. It will not act unless the parties to such dispute request it to act.

"This rule of conduct laid down by the court itself will now be made imperative and binding upon it by an amendment in the new proposed protocol of revision which is before us for signature. That protocol contains new Article 68, reading as follows:

"'In the exercise of its advisory functions the court shall further be guided by the provisions of the statute which apply to contentious cases to the extent which it recognizes them to be applicable.'"

The court, having already recognized this principle of contentious cases to be applicable, is required by this provision in its charter now to forever hereafter act accordingly.

Recommends the Amendments.

"The report of the committee of Jurists of September 13, 1929, recommending these amendments, sets forth the reasons for these amendments as to advisory opinions. The amendments are shown to be general in character, so as to include all nations; they also show that the reason why it is proposed to assimilate the procedure on advisory opinions to the procedure on contentious cases is the fundamental reason that unless both parties to a dispute are present and heard, the opinion will not carry any weight. The report, therefore, makes it clear beyond peradventure that the consent of the disputant nations is required in every case as a precondition to the granting of an advisory opinion involving any dispute.

"By this ruling and amendment another fear as to advisory opinions is removed. If the United States is involved in any dispute or controversy, to whatever degree with another country, that matter can not be brought before the world court without the consent of the United States, even for the purpose of obtaining an advisory opinion.

"It will be noticed that these last considerations fully meet the most important of the last half of the fifth reservation of the Senate. They give to the United States what amounts to an absolute veto upon an advisory opinion touching 'any dispute * * * in which the United States has * * * an interest.'

"There remains only that portion of the last sentence in the fifth reservation, which provides that the court shall not, without the consent of the United States, entertain a request for an advisory opinion touching any question in which the United States merely claims an interest and where the claim does not amount to a dispute or controversy. It will be obvious at once that the scope of this remaining clause is necessarily very narrow.

Would Have Veto Power.

"If the United States has an interest in any matter which another nation is seeking to bring up for an advisory opinion which is of so vital a character that the United States would not be satisfied to appear and present its interest to the court, but desires to shut off all consideration of the court therefrom by its objection, that matter, in all human probability, will have already attained the character of a dispute or controversy between the two nations, in which case the United States already would have a veto power under the new article 68 of the charter statute, which adopts and enacts the spirit of the Eastern Carolia decision. Otherwise we should perforce be brought to assume that the United States under this reservation was seeking rather arbitrarily to interfere with its veto in the affairs of other nations in which it had a very slight interest—a conclusion which is not lightly to be assumed. Therefore, I think it a fair assumption to say that the field covered by this last remaining portion of the fifth reservation is very narrow and the need for such a prohibition unlikely ever to arise.

"Yet this very slight possibility is elaborately guarded against by the new Protocol of Adherence. So anxious have the framers of this protocol been to meet even most at unlikely desires of the United States that they have devoted the major portion of the protocol to providing machinery to meet this contingency.

"Advisory opinions can only be rendered by the court on the request of the council or the assembly of the League of Nations. Article 3 of the proposed protocol provides that the secretary general of the league shall inform the United States of any proposal for obtaining an advisory opinion of the court which is pending before the council or the assembly, with a view to obtaining an exchange of views between the United States and the council or assembly as to whether an interest of the United States is affected. Then when a request for such an opinion actually comes to the court the registrar of the court shall notify the United States and give a reasonable time in which a statement of the United States concerning the request will be received. If necessary, the court will grant a stay of proceedings in respect to the request for such time as is necessary to enable an exchange of views to take place.

"In considering a request for an advisory opinion, if the United States makes objection, there shall be attributed to that objection the same force and effect as attaches to a vote against asking for the opinion given by a member of the council or the assembly.

Can Withdraw Any Time.

"After all these steps have been taken, if it appears that no agreement can be reached and the request for the opinion is still persisted in, and the United States is unwilling to forego its objection, the United States can withdraw immediately from the court without any imputation of unfriendliness or unwillingness to cooperate generally for peace or good will.'

"A mere recital of these precautions makes it apparent how remote the contingency is that the United States will ever be constrained to exercise its right of withdrawal. It may be suggested here that this contingency of withdrawal might place the United States in an awkward or embarrassing position, and thus submit it to moral pressure to permit a question to which it really objects. The real hazard is more likely to be the other way. The influence of the United States is so great, the effect of its mere suggestion of withdrawal would be so embarrassing to the other nations, that there is far more likelihood of their submitting to an ill-founded objection on our part than of their forcing us to withdraw when we really had a legitimate reason for opposition to a question.

"If any proof on this point were needed, the extreme consideration which has been shown in this protocol to the objections of the United States and the promptness and unanimity with which the protocol for our adherence to the court has already been signed by practically all of the nations of the world who are members of the court, would supply it.

Objections Appear Removed.

"It seems to me, therefore, that the dangers which seemed to inhere in the rendering of advisory opinions by the court at the time the question was last presented to this Government in 1926 have been entirely removed, both by the action of the court itself and by the provisions of these new protocols. The objections which caused the Senate reservations have been met. Advisory opinions can no longer be a matter of secret procedure but must follow the forms and receive the safeguards of all formal court proceedings in contentious cases. Whenever a dispute to which we are a party is involved, no opinion on that dispute can be rendered unless we consent. When we claim an interest, although no dispute exists, we can, if we so desire, bring our great influence to bear against the rendering of such an opinion with the same legal standing as if we were a member of the council or the assembly of the League of Nations; and, in the extremely unlikely event of our being unable to persuade the majority of the council or the assembly that our interest is real and that the request for the opinion should not proceed, we may withdraw from membership in the court without any imputation of unfriendliness.

"The general situation in the world has also changed since 1926 in a way which renders the world court more vitally important than ever before. Since that date practically all the nations of the world have by the execution of the pact of Paris renounced war as an instrument of national policy and have solemnly convenanted that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means.'

"By this event not only has the need of developing judicial means instead of war to settle the inevitable controversies between nations become more pressing, but it has become even more important to establish and clarify the standards and rules of international conduct by which such controversies can be prevented or minimized. Never has there been a period in the world's history when there was such an imperative need for the development of international law by an international court. Admitting freely all that must be accomplished toward this end by the quasilegislative action of international conferences which may meet to discuss and agree upon international compacts and codes, it is nevertheless to the judicial action of a world court, passing upon the individual controversies which arise between nations, that we must look not only for the application and interpretation of these compacts and codes but for the flexible and intelligent development in this way of all the subsidiary principles and detailed rules which will surely be found necessary in such application.

Should Be Confident.

"No people are more familiar with this need than the American people, or have greater reason for confidence in this judicial method of developing the law of conduct between separate States. They have seen their own supreme court wisely and flexibly work out the myriad difficult and changing problems which in the course of 140 years have grown out of the compact in which thirteen sovereign States in 1787 agreed to settle their relations by pacific means. And they have seen that court settle these problems between States with no other power or sanction than the mandate of such a compact and the force of public opinion.

"We can not frankly face the limitations which inevitably inhere in the process of enacting laws or creating public compacts—so evident even in domestic legislation; so certain under the much more difficult conditions of international conferences—without appreciating that in this process of interpretation and application, the World Court will perforce take a vital part in the development of international law. The standards set up by international conferences will hardly be able safely to go beyond the statement of broad general principles; the development of details will necessarily grow out of the application of such principles by the court. Here again, to the American brought up under the common law, patiently and intelligently evolved by 600 years of judicial decisions, this will be familiar as the method by which a system of law can be most safely, flexibly and intelligently produced.

"In this work, protected as they are now protected, advisory opinions rendered on questions before they have ripened into bitter quarrels and wounded pride can play a most useful part. Such opinions will be rendered with all the advantages of full argument from opposing interests, but before those interests have settled into dangerous international grievances.

"Not only do the records of the world court show how useful such opinions have already proved to be during the eight years of the court's existence, in the interpretation of international treaty relations in Europe, but the rather similar form of obtaining declaratory judgments of courts upon domestic legislative questions is becoming a not unfamiliar practice in a number of the United States.

Stand at Threshold.

"In the great future work of transforming the civilization of this world from a basis of war and force to one of peace founded upon justice, we today stand at the threshold. But it is already evident that in this work the world court is destined to perform a most fruitful and important part. It is also clear that such an agency is more closely in line with the traditions and habit of thought of America than of any other nation. And finally it is now possible for us to assist in the support and development of this judicial agent without in the slightest degree jeopardizing our traditional policy as a government of not interfering or entangling ourselves in the political policies of foreign states or of relinquishing our traditional attitude as a government toward purely American questions with which we are concerned. Is there any reason why on such terms our Government should not join in the support, moral and financial, of such a court, or why it should not lend its efforts toward the selection of judges who will act in this great work in accordance with the noble traditions of the American judiciary? Or why our Government's great power should not be placed in a position where it can influence for good or check against evil in the future development of the court's charter and work? I think not.

"For all of the foregoing reasons, I have the honor to advise you that, in my opinion, the United States can now safely adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice, and to that end, that the American Minister at Berne should be immediately authorized to attach the signature of the United States to both of the protocols above mentioned now open at Geneva for our signature. Inasmuch as the signature of the United States has never been attached to the original protocol of the world court of 1920, I recommend that he be also authorized to sign that protocol as the formal necessary preliminary to the signature of the United States.

"I am, my dear Mr. President,

"Faithfully yours,

"(Signed) HENRY L. STIMSON."

NEW STORMS HEAD FOR ENGLISH COAST

50 Ships Sunk or Damaged by Hurricane, Which Is Now Subsiding.

DEATH LIST TO RUN HIGH

London, Dec 8 (A.P.).—The terrific gale which has gripped the English coasts for the past several days, causing a loss of life and damage to shipping that can not yet be estimated, subsided somewhat tonight.

The air ministry, however, predicted that further violent storms were en route. The continental shores also had felt the force of the gales, which several times reached hurricane force, from southern Portugal to northern Denmark.

The high wind and mountainous seas prevented relief ships in several instances from reaching other vessels which had reported themselves in great distress hours before. The total of larger vessels which suffered from the storm exceeded 50.

Comparatively little fresh damage was done today, principally because most of the shipping at sea when the gales began last Thursday night had either found their way to port or had been wrecked. Floods continued on land, but there was less damage reported from flying debris. With the fate of several vessels not definitely known it was impossible to estimate the loss of life, but it was known to run into scores.

Big Liners Are Battered.

The finest of ocean liners found themselves almost helpless from the force of the gale. The American liner President Roosevelt, from New York, reached Plymouth today after battling the hurricane. Her officers said the velocity of the wind exceeded 100 miles an hour at times and had done some deck damage. George Stopfer, a German, was lost overboard, but it was assumed he was a suicide.

The seriousness of the storm was shown in the wreckage which strewed the coasts. Several bodies were washed ashore. One recovered at Hartland was believed to have been that of the member of the crew of the steamer Radyr, which sank Saturday. It was tentatively identified as that of Radio Operator Meredith.

Another body was seen in the surf at Welcombe, on the Devon coast, but could not be recovered. A lifebuoy with the name Mira Gella was found at Lulworth, Dorset, but no such ship had been reported in distress.

Greek Steamer Hard Hit.

The Greek steamer Georgios P. lost several lifeboats, and one of its crew was sent ashore with a broken leg. Cabins on the Japanese steamship Tasmanian Transport were flooded and some of its lifeboats smashed. The ship also lost its anchor and cables, and so had to steam around until able to enter a dock.

The British liner Valacia's boats were smashed and other deck damages done by the mammouth waves. The steamer Laristan radioed that she had suffered damage and that her captain had suffered a broken leg.

RULE FOR INSERT . . . . . .

Brest, France, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Several ships either foundered or were in distress today in the most violent tempest that has struck the French Atlantic seaboard in many years.

Tug Rescues One Crew.

The ocean-going tug Iroise made port this afternoon with the survivors of the Danish cargo boat Helen, which lost her first mate and one sailor off Ushant Light early today when a gigantic comber swept the deck.

The Spanish freighter Galdames went aground just outside Brest Roads in Bottleneck Pass. Two members of the crew drowned.

The British ship Essex Heath was waterlogged and reported sinking between Ushant and Brest. The British ship Tinybridge wirelessed that she was foundering 25 miles west of Bishops Rock.

The three-master Notre Dame de Bonne Nouvelle, a French sailing vessel, and the schooner Berthe both foundered off Ushant Light this morning. The crews were saved.

The telegraph wires between Brest, Paris, Havre and Cherbourg were down.

At Llanelly, Wales, the 130-foot chimney of the power station was blown over this evening, smashing half of the station, crippling the plant, stopping street cars and darkening the town.

same as repeatedly announced by Premier Mussolini, namely that Italy is ready to accept any reduction, however sweeping, providing other countries reduce their armaments proportionately.

It Italy, in other words has suggested that France herself should fix the limit of naval armaments, Italy binding herself to accept the limit set by France without argument providing that France recognizes the right of Italy to perfect equality with her.

The French answer to the proposal made to the Quai d'Orsay by Count Manzoni, Italian Ambassador in Paris, ignores such equality of navies and suggests rather that France is entitled to a stronger navy than Italy. This reply caused considerable surprise here.

It was pointed out that Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, during the Washington conference, had cabled delegation authorizing acceptance of parity with Italy, not only where capital ships were concerned, but also in light craft, provided France was left free to fix the maximum limit of these two categories of war craft to suit her needs.

France, in the reply just received, has avoided giving direct answer to the Italian request for naval parity and has changed the basis for discussion to a claim that the respective strength of the two navies should be made dependent on the geographical positions of the two countries. It was felt here that if discussion began on such a basis it could be continued indefinitely without reaching any practical conclusion.

from his counting, and noted the bill and then decided to try to get the man to stay in the hotel while the authorities were notified. He asked the man to wait a few minutes and he would have the change. The Chinese said he was in a hurry, and quickly left the hotel. Just a few minutes later the police arrived and took up the search.

Heare told the police that he had seen the man before. He declared his belief that the man again would attempt to pass the bill at the Sterling, and for that reason he was asked to keep in touch with secret service agents.

That the Chinese might have been an employe of one of the local Chinese restaurants is Heare's opinion. There are many such places close to the Sterling.

THREE CHILDREN DIE AS BLAST ROCKS HOME

sioner Whalen, who was at the scene before the dynamite fumes had cleared, learned that Falzone had plenty of trouble at home. One of his family fights was the subject of patient adjudication at the Wilson Avenue Police Station last June when his wife wanted him locked up for threatening to kill her. He had a pistol and a pistol permit given him upon the recommendation of Capt. Foley of the Stagg Street Police Station.

Another Woman in Case.

Another woman entered the fragmentary story of the bombing today. She is Mrs. Fay Stohrer, younger than Mrs. Falzone. The police found Mrs. Stohrer at her home. She was very frightened and told them that Falzone had asked her to go on the hunting trip with him.

"He acted so strangely that I was afraid to go with him," detectives quote Mrs. Stoher as saying.

One of the letters found in Falzone's home was dated October last. The old-fashioned Mafia design of a heart pierced by a stiletto was the only signature.

"We want $6.000 and after that you are not finished. You get out of this country and go back to Italy," the note read.

Asks Matter Be Dropped.

Shortly after the date appearing on the letter, Falzone took the note to the police and they began an investigation. Presently, Falzone produced another letter. This gave detailed instructions for the paying of the money on one of the night boats plying between New York and Boston. Detective Thomas Carroll made an appointment with Falzone to accompany him on the trip. The detective went on the boat, but could not find Falzone or anybody to receive the dummy package he had prepared to trap the alleged blackmailers.

After this Falzone told the police to drop the matter, detectives said.

AIRPLANE CARRIER'S CONTRACT IS READY

Plans and Specifications of New Navy Ship Are Drawn for Bidders.

OTHER VESSELS PLANNED

(Associated Press.)

The contract, plans and specifications for the airplane carrier authorized in the fifteen-cruiser bill have been completed and are ready for prospective bidders.

This fact was revealed yesterday in the annual report of the Navy Bureau of Construction and Repair. Details of the ships, which is to be of approximately 14,000 tons in contrast with the 33,000 tons of the Lexington and Saratoga, were not given in the report.

The bureau also advised the Secretary of the Navy that it expects to have plans for another fleet submarine of the V-type ready shortly and that preliminary plans for a salvage vessel, as requested by Congress, are virtually complete.

The construction bureau reported that it has been passing upon designs of vessels to be built under provisions of the Jones-White act with a view to conversion of these merchant ships into naval auxiliaries. The design of a proposed large high-speed passenger liner, presumably the "super-Leviathan" type which has been submitted to the Shipping Board by the United States lines, was included in these studies. Work of preparing for arming existing merchant vessels in case of emergency also was reported to be going ahead.

Several alterations to submarines to facilitate escape of the crew in case of disaster have been ordered made on all vessels now in commission, including installation of valves to supply air to individual compartments, single-action watertight doors in the main compartment bulkheads, Quick-operating door latches and alteration to hatches to permit escape of the crew from either end compartment.

In addition two submarines, the S-22 and the S-29 are being equipped for experimental purposes with appliances adding great weight that might interfere with military effectiveness. The appliances include lifting eyes, market buoys at each end of the vessel, each buoy equipped with light and telephone, and strengthened bulkheads.

Youth, 18, Is Held On Speeding Count

Made Better Than 60 Miles Per Hour, Maryland Policeman Asserts.

Richard Thompson, 18 years old, of Washington, was arrested early yesterday morning near College Park, Md., on a charge of exceeding the speed limit. He was returned to Bladensburg, but was subsequently released pending further hearing.

Louis Bloom, Maryland State policeman, who made the arrest, said he was just entering the office of Justice of the Police G. S. Phillips at Berwyn, Md., early yesterday when three automobiles went racing past on the Baltimore boulevard. He gave chase and two of the cars turned off into side roads. He overtook the third at College Park and arrested Thompson.

Thompson, and a companion, whose name was not given, boasted they had been "doing 65," Bloom said.

picked up immediately. It was taken to Letterman Hospital, where he was pronounced dead by physicians.

Every movement of the accident was recorded by news reel photographers as well as sound pictures.

As Ferguson fell out of the glider Army officers had considerable trouble in keeping back the crowd.

The airplane towing the glider made a safe landing.

Ferguson was president of the California Glider Club and the members of that organization on May 30, 1929, prevented him from taking off a high hill in Marin County in an attempt to glide over the Golden Gate through court action.

Ferguson's wife was on the field. She collapsed when he plunged out of the plane and was taken to a hospital.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETIES CONVENE

COLTON TO LEAVE SOON

Twenty-seven parishes participated yesterday in the annual meeting of the St. Vincent de Paul Societies in the school assembly room at St. Martin's Church, following mass in the church and breakfast for the members.

George Cleary, president of the particular council of the society, presided, while Maurice Moore, secretary, was in charge of the reports of the 27 parishes. These reports, dealing with the charity work done by the various member societies, revealed work along charity lines being done by the societies.

Representative Edwin Irwin, of Illinois, was the principal speaker. Others who made addresses were W. F. Montavon, Joseph Berberich, John G. Cowen, of the St. Girard Conference of San Antonio, Tex., and John Hadley Doyle.

The latter part of the meeting developed into a farewell for Joseph Colton, who for 30 years has had charge of the prison welfare work of the society. Colton is moving from Washington to New Orleans because of the illness of his wife.

Colton has maintained rooms on K street northwest, where clothing has been distributed to "down-and-outers" just out of prison. This work was lauded in speeches by P. J. Haltigan, John McCarron, president of the Holy Name Society; John Pellen, former president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, and William Edwards, who has been associated with Colton in his prison work for many years.

The Rev. Francis X. Cavanagh delivered an address of welcome to the members.

courthouse. And now that a grand jury has refused to return an indictment, these senators are glad that they took such a stand.

One provision in the Blease resolution directs the subcommittee to determine why Robert J. Allen was suspended as a policeman while he was investigating the McPherson case.

Hunt Seen as Ridiculous.

In view of the fact that Allen subsequently was suspended a second time and then dismissed from the force, such an inquiry by the subcommittee now would seem to the aforementioned senators as a somewhat ridiculous hunt into ancient history.

The resolution also directed the subcommittee to determine why there was a delay in returning an indictment in the last tong murder here and how many Chinese have been given or denied permits to carry revolvers.

Statements answering these queries have been sent in by United States Attorney Rover and Police Court Judge Schuldt, but thus far have not been made public.

GRAND JURY TO GET GUCKERT SLAYING

22 CASES ARE PENDING

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Among the cases to be presented to a grand jury in the Corporation Court today, Judge William P. Woods presiding, will be that of Charles R. Acton, charged on the police records with the fatal shooting of Irvin Guckert, the night of October 4.

Acton, who is 51 years old, was employed as night watchman at the greenhouses of Guckert & Beck, at Mount Vernon avenue and Braddock road. Guckert, who was 17 years old, was the son of one of the former owners of the greenhouses, his father having sold his interest a short time previous to the shooting. Acton, after the shooting, claimed that he had had words with young Guckert on several occasions, and that Guckert had come back repeatedly to renew the quarrel. Acton claimed that on the evening of October 4, Guckert came to the greenhouses where Acton was on duty, and acted in a threatening manner, whereupon Acton, fearing injury, drew his revolver and fired one shot, which entered Guckert's abdomen, causing death the following day. Acton, by reason of his position as watchman, claimed that he was a special officer, and as such was authorized to be armed. His claim was that he first drew a blackjack and threatened Guckert with that before drawing and firing his revolver, when Guckert approached a workman's bench on which were pipe fittings and heavy tools.

Young Guckert, after the shooting, got into his automobile and drove away. He reached the residence of N. R. Spillman, 59 East Walnut street, Rosemont, left his automobile and collapsed. Spillman summoned an ambulance and had him carried to the hospital.

At the coroner's inquest the day following Guckert's death, Royal Wynings, manager of the greenhouses where Acton was employed, testified that a few minutes before 6 o'clock on the evening of the shooting, when he left the greenhouses, Acton, who had just come on duty, appeared to have been drinking, having the odor of liquor on his breath. Wynings said he appeared again in that condition. Miss Mary Reeves, Guckert's fiancee, went to the hospital immediately after Guckert was taken there, and remained with him until his death.

Twenty-one other indictments will be asked of the grand jury by Albert V. Bryan, Commonwealth's attorney, among them being the case of Charles, Henry and Albert Poss, brothers, charged with robbing a houseboat belonging to Edward Dean, on October 27, and another against the same three for an alleged attack on Dr. W. Clyde West, former city health officer, which is alleged to have occurred in the doctor's office on November 2.

The jury, summoned by City Sergeant Robert H. Cox, is composed of Wilbert C. Baggett, William J. Boothe, W. Selden Washington, R. E. McGahey, Harry Hammond, James M. Duncan, Thomas J. Fannon, Robert L. Kane, Abe L. Cohen, Robert M. Colvin and Frank W. Noxon.

Mrs. Forest Remschel is chairman of the program for the meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary to be held Thursday evening, when definite announcement will be made as to whether the service sale chairman, Mrs. L. H. Dudley, will conduct a sale before the Christmas holidays. These sales are of articles made by disabled men in service hospitals, a percentage of the receipts going direct to the man who makes the article and the remainder to the hospital for expense in providing materials. The local auxiliary unit conducts the sale and bears all expense of having the articles sent and transmitting the receipts to the hospital authorities.

Mrs. R. B. English, the president, has announced the inauguration of a membership drive for the auxiliary. The hristmas plans for the men in hospitals will be discussed at this meeting, Mrs. George W. Roop, rehabilitation chairman, having charge of this work.

The schedule of drills for the local military company, known as Company L, 183d Infantry, Virginia National Guard, under command of Capt. W. Cameron Roberts, for the month of December, will be each Monday night from 7:30 to 9 o'clock, as regulations provide a full hour and 30 minutes must be spent in military instruction. Also all noncommissioned officers are required to be in the orderly room at 7:15 o'clock each drill night, and the full personnel must be on the floor by 7:30 o'clock.

Tonight the first 15 minutes will be used for instruction in military courtesy; 7:45 to 8:30, first aid demonstrations; 8:30 to 9, close order drill. December 23, 7:30 to 9, Marksmanship.

Dr. J. W. Wheat, a son of the late Robert W. Wheat, of this city, and whose home has been at Upperville, Va., for a number of years past, died yesterday in the Winchester, Va., Hospital, and the funeral will be held in this city. The deceased is survived by two sisters, Miss Sue Lee Wheat, of Upperville, and Mrs. Mary Herwing, of Newport, R. I., and several nieces and nephews, among them Robert W. Wheat 3rd, of this city.

The body of John Fred Brasse, aged 26 years, who died in Lynchburg, Va., was brought to Wheatley's Funeral Home yesterday, and the funeral will be held at 11 o'clock this morning, with burial at Oakton, Fairfax County. He is survived by four brothers, Ernest B., Harvey R., Chester M. and Robert M. Brasse, and three sisters, Misses Erna C. and May Brasse and Mrs. Elsie C. Cochran.

R. E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, will hold a meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at Lee Camp Hall, when action will be taken upon an invitation from Washington Camp of Sons of Confederate Veterans to attend a meeting tomorrow night at the Confederate Memorial Building, Vermont avenue, Washington, and arrangements made for a delegation from the city to go.

BROOKHART RAPS U. S. COURTS FOR ALLEGED DRY LAW LAXITY

Senator Brookhart approved President Hoover's law enforcement policy, but declared the President made a gigantic mistake in reappointing Andrew Mellon Secretary of the Treasury.

Declaring that Mellon should be removed from office, the senator likewise stated the issuance of domestic liquor permits and the border patrol work should be investigated.

More Men Needed, Claim.

Concerning the Canadian border patrol work, Senator Brookhart said he had made an investigation and found the border was patrolled largely by immigration and customs officials, and that the force was entirely inadequate. He said that more men are needed in the patrol work and that should be supplied with fast boats for work on the water borders.

"Yet," he continued, "when we gave Secretary Mellon $50,000,000 for patrol work on the borders, he declared he didn't need it."

The senator declared prohibition could not be called a failure until it has been enforced, because enforcement is the test of any law. Concerning Washington, he stated, the law had already proved its worth.

Decrease in Drunks Cited.

"I visited the Capitol in 1896," he said. "At that time there was a bar in the House restaurant, and I saw more drunk congressmen then than I have seen drunk people during the seven years I have been here."

The only reference Senator Brookhart made to the "Wall street party" was in connection with an account of his expose of liquor activities in the Iowa National Guard, in which he was an officer.

"Although the officers exposed were very mad with me," he stated, "they later invited me as a guest of honor to their banquet. However, I don't expect to be a guest of honor at any Wall street dinner."

McBride Also Speaks.

Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Antisaloon League of America, also spoke at the meeting, which was attended by fewer than 100 persons. He declared "prohibition is right because it is the only solution to the liquor problem." He also declared the prohibitory law had already proved a great success.

Superintendent McBride asked the assemblage to "back up" prohibition and President Hoover in his enforcement program.

Yesterday's meeting was the first of a series which the Antisaloon League is sponsoring during this week, designated as "dry week" in Washington. Another meeting will be held tonight at Friends Church, where President Hoover worships. United States Attorney Leo A. Rover will speak.

SEVEN BANDITS ROB 50 AT DINNER PARTY

other armed men in the gathering submitted to having their revolvers, together with their money and jewelry, taken from them.

The six unmasked men passed through the dining room and collected the money and jewelry, but several of the dinner guests saved some of their valuable by dropping them to the floor.

The leader of the robbers covered the retreat of the band and informed those at the dinner that he would remain at the foot of the stairs for three minutes and would kill any one who followed. At the end of three minutes he called back that he was still there. Then those at the dinner heard the sound of an automobile starting.

12 KILLED AS CHINESE PIRATES ATTACK SHIP

was killed, another wounded, and Chief Officers Perry received a wound.

Meanwhile the young Chinese radio operator kept his head and sent out distress calls which were picked up by the destroyer Sterling. While the destroyer, under full steam, was speeding to the rescue, the Pirates used kerosene to set fire to the deck and bridge.

Panic-stricken Chinese passengers swarmed from below as the smoke poured over the vessel. Mothers, clasping children in their arms, leaped overboard, while others of the passengers attempted to launch lifeboats. In their haste three of the boats, overcrowded by the frightened people who jumped into them, overturned and many were drowned.

The superstructure was burning freely when the Sterling came alongside. Its men quickly captured the remaining pirates and extinguished the flames. The Sirdar arrived soon afterward. The uninjured passengers were transferred to the warships, which then proceeded slowly to this city with the crippled ship.

to search along the gulf for the two fliers, believed down in the fog.

Carrothers and Schrock, at Kissimmee, had no money and put in a telephone call from the police station there to Dempsey here. They learned then that he and Smith had been killed. Carrothers and Schrock returned here tonight.

Dempsey Friend of Lindbergh.

St. Louis, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Elmer A. (Boots) Dempsey, one of two St. Louis air men killed today at Kissimmee, Fla., when a refueling plane they were piloting caught fire as it crashed, was a veteran flier and friend of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Dempsey, 34, learned to fly in 1922 and was one of the aviators associated with Lindbergh at Lambert-St. Louis Field, here. Later Dempsey became pilot of a private plane owned by Oscar Johnson, of the International Shoe Co., of St. Louis, and then was an instructor at a flying school at Champaign, Ill. More recently he was test pilot for the Curtiss Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., succeeding Forest O'Brine, coholder of the present endurance record, in that position.

Stanley Smith, the other flier killed at Tampa, was known here chiefly as an airplane mechanic. He formerly was in the Army Air Service, at Scott Field, Ill. He was associated with Dempsey here and at Champaign and about two months ago they made an unsuccessful attempt to set a new endurance record at Granite City, Ill. R. W. Shrock and Leonard Carrothers, endurance fliers, injured following crash of the refueling plane, were associated with Dempsey and Smith in the Granite City venture. Schrock resided at Taylorville, Ill., where he managed an airport.

Neither Smith nor Dempsey was married.

Pilot and Woman Killed.

Stamford, Tex., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Cotton Hansen, pilot, and Miss Winnie Williams, of this place, passenger, were killed in an airplane crash here tonight. The plane burst into flames as it struck the earth and burned the bodies.

TARIFF MAY DELAY TAX-SLASH PASSAGE

Senators Seek Arrangement for Early Action, but Program in Doubt.

TO REPORT BILL TODAY

(Associated Press.)

Senate leaders sought an arrangement yesterday for early disposition of the $160,000,000 tax reduction resolution, but the program was in doubt last night.

Spokesmen for the Democratic-Republican independent coalition which has control of the tariff measure offered to set that bill aside today under an agreement that the tax resolution be taken up immediately and voted upon by tomorrow at the latest.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, who sought the arrangement yesterday on procedure, took under consideration this offer but Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, who has charge of the tax resolution, was determined last night to go ahead with the tariff bill first.

However, it appeared likely that the question of priority of the tax or tariff legislation would be thrashed out today on the floor when Senator Smoot reports the resolution in the same form as it was adopted by the House last week.

Adoption by the Senate of the tax resolution without amendment seemed assured with both Democratic and Republican leaders supporting it. Republican independents are considering an attempt to modify the resolution, but they realize that such an effort probably will be futile without support from the Republican regulars or from the Democrats. They do not favor the reduction in the corporation tax applying on this year's income, believing the corporations already have passed this tax on to the customers.

Both Senators Simmons, of North Carolina, and Harrison, of Mississippi, ranking Democrats on the finance committee, announced yesterday they would favor immediate consideration of the tax resolution. Senator Simmons said he would agree to this if the Senate would agree to vote upon the resolution after one day or two days of debate and then return to the tariff.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, a leader of the Western Republican independents, looks favorably upon the program also, provided the Senate would agree to return to the tariff measure not later than Wednesday.

Senator Smoot made no comment, merely announcing "we will go ahead tomorrow with the tariff bill and we will keep at it until we know when we are going to finish." Calling attention that the income taxes are not due until next March 15, Senator Smoot said there would be ample time for disposition of the tax resolution.

With some confusion apparent on the tax reduction-tariff procedure, it was considered possible last night that President Hoover's wishes might prove decisive on settling the question. There is a possibility that Mr. Hoover may be asked to indicate whether he wants the tax cut put through immediately or to have another attempt made to dispose of the tariff.

Some senators still have a hope that it might be possible to dispose of the tariff before Christmas. If it becomes apparent that this can not be done, it is believed that all then will be willing to take up the tax resolution and act upon it at once.

Massey Aiding Little Theater Plans Abroad

Brother of Minister of Canada Is Writing and Producing.

TRAVELING straight from America to England the Little Theater movement has captured London. And hot on its heels is Mr. Raymond Massey, brother of Mr. Vincent Massey, Minister of Canada, whose devotion to the arts draws a distinguished group of connoisseurs to the legation there. Across the Atlantic his younger brother carries on the traditions of the Massey family by writing, acting and producing plays of outstanding merit until his name has become one to be reckoned with in the annals of dramatic art in sophisticated England.

Mr. Massey's most recent role of producer associates with him John Drinkwater, Marie Lohr, Leslie Banks and other theatrical "lights" in the founding of the swankiest of drama clubs, the new Bruton Club in Mayfair which is housed in the residence adjoining that formerly occupied by the Duke and Duchess of York.

The building will seat 550, will have an exhibition gallery, an art studio, a concert hall and a roof garden, which accoutrement has a peculiarly expensive and American ring to the ears of Thespians on this side of the water. However, English correspondents frankly trace the new movement to their American cousins, pointing out the Players' Theater in London, modeled according to Litttle Theaters as observed in the United States by the English actor-producer, Dorita Curtis Hayward. As further proof of American influence the second offering at the Players', beginning late in November, was none other than "The Comic Artist," the work of Susan Glaspell and Norman Watson, two popular American writers.

Mr. Massey predicts in the British metropolis increasing interest in theatrical clubs, several of which, like the Provincetown Players and the New York Theater Guild, are organized on a subscription basis. The London theaters, be it noted, exclude the general public from their performances by limiting the sale of tickets to subscribers. Thus do they flaunt the red flag of freedom before the London censor, as they produce their plays without license, paying but scant attention to the wounding of the ultra sensitive play patron.

The Gate Theater, one of the lately established groups, has offered the plays of Eugene O'Neil as well as one or two plays suppressed in New York. Mr. Thurston McCauley, English critic, declares that the Little Theater movement is the source of most of the stimulating ventures in the English theater, while restricting the productions well within the bounds of decency.

At the other end of the drama's "social register" emerges the Independent Labor Party to sponsor Sunday night plays by the formation of a guild to present worth-while plays for work-a-day people. London playgoers are wondering if this sudden gesture on the part of the Labor party may carry not only a note of irony but also a rebuke, inasmuch as London's white way attributes much of the support of a startling number of good plays to the 20-shilling-a-week patron.

All of which gives rise to the question, will Miss Isibel MacDonald make her debut into the world of "make believe" by lending active support to the movement?

For ev ry one knows the remarkable versatility of the prime minister's daughter, whose endeavors run the gamut from succoring distressed children in the slums of London to public addresses on economics and politics in the teeming industrial centers of the empire.

Washington society recalls the Scotch maid's keen enjoyment of the drama during her visit here in October when, between "jumps" on a busy social calendar, she managed to visit several productions at local playhouses.

Election returns from California are most gratifying to Representative Florence Pragg Kahn. No, of course she has not been up for reelection, but she has just received word that her mother, Mrs. Mary Pragg, has again been elected to the Board of Education of San Francisco. Mrs. Pragg is 84 years young, very active and keenly interested in civic matters. Indeed, when Mrs. Kahn goes home to visit each summer she is on her toes trying to keep up with her mother.

Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan and Brig. Gen. J. Leslie Kincaid, who sailed for Europe late in November, arrived in Paris last week after a short time passed in England. They went to Paris to arrange for the battlefield tour of the Twenty-seventh Division in May and the visit of about 6,000 Gold Star Mothers to France.

The Hungarian Minister and Countess Laszlo Szechenyi have sent out invitations for a small dance to be held on New Year's Eve at the legation, 1424 Sixteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Walter H. Schoellkopf, wife of the Second Secretary of the American Embassy in Madrid who recently arrived in New York on the Ile de France, will remain in the United States until after the holidays.

Mrs. Walter Ewing Hope, wife of the newly appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, was honored by a luncheon Saturday, given by Mrs. Ernest Frederick Eidlitz at 920 Fifth avenue, New York. Mrs. Hope will join Mr. Hope in Washington within a short time.

Mrs. Lewis Hancock, jr., has as her guests her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bright, of Wildwood, N. J. While in town Mr. Bright, who is a former president of the New Jersey Senate, is renewing old friendships at the Capitol, where he has passed much of his time the last few days.

Capt. and Mrs. McSherry Are Hosts at Dinner.

Capt. and Mrs. Frank J. McSherry gave a dinner Saturday evening at the Army, Navy and Marine Country Club.

Mrs. James C. Pilling will have as guests for Christmas her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Dunham, and their three children, who will come from their home on Long Island to spend the holidays. As Miss Ruth Pilling, Mrs. Dunham spent her girlhood in Washington and has many friends here.

Mrs. Florence T. Griswold, of San Antonio, national Republican committee woman from Texas, arrived in Washington yesterday and is a guest at the Willard while in town.

Mr. H. O. Bursum, former senator from New Mexico, is again a guest at the Willard.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Woods, of Lincoln, Nebr., spent last week in New York and are now in Washington at the Mayflower for a ten-day visit before returning West.

Mr. Ermillo Bagnara and his sister, Miss Giugi Bagnara, of Genoa, Italy, who are making a six-week visit in this country, are now in Washington at the Mayflower.

To erect a fitting monument to the memory of the late Myron T. Herrick, Ambassador to France, the Municipal Council in Paris will open a public subscription appeal next week that the French people, who loved him and whom Mr. Herrick loved so well, may have the opportunity of contributing to the fund.

Today a special commission will further consider the nature of the memorial and will launch final plans for the distribution of thousands of posters in Paris and throughout France in order that the entire Nation may lend support to the cost of the monument. In announcing the plans, M. Dandigne, president of the Municipal Council, paid splendid tribute to Mr. Herrick, whose loss, he said, was an irreparable one to France.

Dance Honors Capital Girl In New York

Miss Laura Tuckerman Is Principal Guest of the Gardiners.

Miss Laura Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, whose debut has been the incentive for many smart affairs in Washington, was the guest of honor at a dance given at the Park Lane in New York Saturday night by Mrs. Robert A. Gardiner and Miss Alexandra Diodati Gardiner. Among the debutante group who went from Washington to the dance were Countess Cornelia Szechenyi, Miss Loranda Prochnik and Miss Elsie Ekengren. Miss Margaret Tyner, who arrived a few days ago from Europe with her mother, Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, and who will come to Washington this week, was also a guest.

Mrs. Gardiner gave a dinner at the Sherry-Netherland for Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman preceding the dance, while Miss Gardiner and Miss Tuckerman were the guests in whose honor Miss Mollie Cullum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Barlow Cullum, gave a dinner at the Embassy Club.

The dance was held in the Florentine room of the Park Lane. Transformed into a patio with smilax-hung walls the effect of southern climes was further carried out by the al fresco sky shining through iron grilles. On either side of the windows were silver vases holding yellow lillies. In the tapestry room a miniature orange grove was illumined by a full moon. Tropical ferns and orange and yellow balloons further adorned the room which was flooded with colored lights.

Miss Katherine Huston entertained a company of 24 at the supper dance at the Club Chantecler on Saturday evening.

Fifth Ave. Fashions NEW YORK

By MARIE PAULETTE.

THE lengthened silhuoette with molded hipline and higher waistline persists in fashionable circles. It flatters the shorter woman, giving her grace and height. It makes the stout woman appear charmingly slender, and accentuates slimness for youthful type.

The model I've selected is extremely wearable in novelty printed silk crepe in dark green tones. A jabot frill of plain blending crepe caught at right shoulder takes a diagonal course and terminates at left hip. It softens line of bodice and detracts from width. The front shoulders are narrowed by inverted tucks. Sleeves are fitted with darts and finished with cuffs with tab ends. Collarless Vionnet neckline is very becoming.

The hips are snugly fitted with band that is perforated to be made in three sections. As sketched, the center section uses the plain crepe.

The attached skirt is circular and fitted through hips with full flaring hem.

Style No. 8236 can be had in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. In the medium size, it is made with 3½ yards of 39-inch material with ¾ yard of 39-inch contrasting.

It makes up beautifully in crepe satin in black or tobacco brown with the reverse of crepe used for jabot frill, cuffs and center section of hip band.

Bottle green sheer velvet, black rust brown tones, and dahlia purple canton crepe are delightful ideas for afternoons.

For conservative wear, featherweight tweed, wool crepe, flat silk crepe, crepe de chine and covert cloth appropriate.

For a pattern of today's style, fill out coupon, writing very clearly, and be sure to state number and size of pattern. Send coupon with 15 cents (stamps or coin) to Fashion Bureau, The Washington Post, 259 Fifth avenue, New York City.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

DECEMBER 9.

QUEEN CHRISTIANA of Sweden, whose early career gave such glowing promise of the future, but which ended so disappointingly, was born this day, 1626. She was one of the most remarkable women of her time.

At 6, Christiana became queen. She renounced the pleasure of her age to apply herself with extreme diligence to study. As a result when she took over the government at 18, she was one of the most learned women in Europe. She immediately displayed a great talent for the business of government, and an equal firmness of purpose. Under her wise reign, commerce and literature flourished. When she was 24, she caused herself to be crowned king, with much pomp and ceremony. This marked the beginning of her decline. She came to depend on her favorites for advice and squandered the public treasury. In the confusion of affairs, she abdicated, left Sweden and traveled over Europe. She entered Rome on horseback, clad in the costume of an Amazon. In the last year of her life she settled down and occupied herself in study.

Emma Wetherell, American operatic singer, was born this day, 1849.

the three-roo corrugated iron home on the rocky mountain top, ran a telephone line connecting with Keetmanshoop, the neares town. A radio, a Christmas gift from the National Geographic Society, brought them cable news of the United States.

The second year the observatory staff received the mechanical parts of an electric refrigerator. They built a refrigerator around this unit. Thereafter ice cream was served on the volcano top.

"A man setting up a solar radiation observatory has to be a jack-of-all-trades," says Hoover. "Greely and I were carpenters, plumbers, mechanics, electricians and farmers alternately."

"One night we heard noises that sounded like a lion," he said, telling about the leopard, "and next morning three of our chickens were missing. Then we auspected our visitor to have been a leopard, and the following night set a big trap. The leopard got into the trap, but went off, trap and all.

"Next morning we trailed him and finally located him in a crevice. I fired, wounding the leopard, which at once leaped toward us. We were on a ledge. The animal just barely missed the ledge and, as it tumbled down the rock, Greely fired and killed it. Although neither of us was injured, the experience taught us never to go after leopards with a .22 rifle."

The ringhals cobra, a snake that grows 6 feet in length, was a frequent visitor at the Mount Brukkaros Observatory. More than half a dozen were killed near the house. Snakebite serum is kept in the icebox at all times. Once a cobra coiled itself on the front porch. Another time, as Hoover entered the storehouse, he felt moisture on his cheek and looked up to see a ringhals cobra lying above the door. The snake had spit its poison at him. He ran out, got his gun and killed the snake.

The ringhals cobra shoots its venom as well as injecting it with the fangs. The poison shot through the air is not dangerous to humans unless it gets into the eyes.

THE SO-CALLED WORLD COURT.

In correspondence made public today the Secretary of State advises President Hoover of the reasons why, in Mr. Stimson's opinion, it is desirable to set aside the Senate's reservation relating to the so-called World Court and to accept a substitute arrangement prepared by foreign diplomats at Geneva.

The Senate reservation debars the League of Nations, without the consent of the United States, from obtaining an advisory opinion from the so-called World Court on any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest.

The substitute arrangement prepared at Geneva provides that the League of Nations may obtain an advisory opinion on any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest, notwithstanding the objection of the United States; and that if the United States does not approve of the league's action it can withdraw from the court.

Under the Senate reservation the League of Nations can not use the so-called World Court for political purposes against the interest of the United States. Under the Geneva substitute the league can go ahead and use the World Court for political purposes in disputes or questions vitally affecting the United States.

It is proposed by foreign nations that the United States shall tear up the Senate reservation and accept a substitute which gives the League of Nations power to overrule the United States in questions that may affect the independence, vital interests, or honor of the Republic.

The protocols attempting to carry into effect the foreign substitute for the Senate's safeguarding reservation will be signed today at Berne by an agent of the United States, and will be submitted to the Senate for its approval.

Unless the Senate has changed its mind and is now ready to accept the overlordship of the League of Nations it will reject the protocols that are to be submitted.

The letter of the Secretary of State is a repetition of the misleading arguments heretofore advanced, attempting to show that the so-called World Court is independent of the League of Nations. It is assuming abysmal ignorance on the part of the people of the United States to suppose that they are deceived as to the true character of the court set up by the League of Nations. The people know that the court is the creature of the league; that its judges are elected, paid, dismissed and pensioned by the league; that the court is bound to give advice to the league; that the statute of the court has just been amended by the league; that governments can not change the statute without the consent of the league; that the existence of the court depends upon the existence of the league; that the covenant of the league is the supreme law of the court; that any act of the league is binding law upon the court; that the court has lent itself to the political schemes of the league, notably in the dispute in which Great Britain wrested the Mosul oil fields from Turkey; that the league is a European political machine whose objectives clash with the interests of the United States, so that the league court's advice in a question touching American rights would inevitably go against the United States and in favor of European interests.

A true World Court, entirely judicial in character, independent of any nation or group of nations, and applying international law to cases actually submitted to it by contending nations, is very desirable. Americans would be delighted to see the United States become a supporter of such a court.

A bogus court, masquerading as a World Court, when in fact it is an agency and servant of a political and militaristic league controlled by a few European powers for their own ends, is the kind of court which Americans will not support. The creation of this false court and the persistent pretense that it is a genuine World Court of Justice is one of the most injurious steps ever taken against human welfare, because it makes more difficult the establishment of a world tribunal empowered to substitute law for war.

By rejecting the League of Nations' scheme that is now to be proposed, the Senate will be doing America's share toward killing off a fraud and promoting the ultimate creation of a genuine court that can hold the nations in the leash of law.

MUSCLE SHOALS AGAIN.

Disposition of the Muscle Shoals plant will again confront Congress at the present session. For ten years the plant has been idle while Congress has wrangled over how it shall be operated. All attempts to put the Government in the power and nitrate manufacturing business have failed. There has been talk of reviving the Norris bill which President Coolidge pocket-vetoed two years ago, but President Hoover's message should be sufficient to discourage such attempts. His statement of opposition to governmental operation of the plant may be interpreted as a warning that any bill for that purpose will be vetoed.

Senator Black, of Alabama, has introduced amendments to the Norris bill providing for completion of the third dam and leasing of the nitrate plant for the manufacture of fertilizer. He would provide for a rental of $1 per year and would limit the price of fertilizer produced at Muscle Shoals to 8 per cent above the cost of manufacture. The ostensible purpose of these amendments is to furnish cheap fertilizer to farmers of the South. A provision that if no suitable offer were received within three months, the Government would go ahead and operate the plant, leaves a serious loophole which the President would not likely approve.

President Hoover's plan is to make use of such parts of the plant as are useful for experimentation in agricultural chemistry, and to lease the remainder. Revenue from the leases would be used to support research in agricultural chemistry, so that the benefits from the plant would be devoted entirely to agriculture. The President suggests appointment of a special commission with authority to make a contract on behalf of the Government.

Schemes to put the Government in the nitrate and power business are dead, and should be cleared away so that Congress can go ahead with a plan to make Muscle Shoals useful to the public and profitable to the Government.

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR WOMEN.

The thousands of American women who are content to reign supreme in the realms assigned by tradition to their sex are reminded once more that they do not have equal rights with men. So far as the law is concerned, distinctions are still made between men and women in matters of employment, jury service and nationality. But the average woman is not aware that she is mistreated until that militant group seeking "equal rights" brings the subject to her attention.

The convention of the National Woman's Party being held in Washington once more brings the controversy to the fore. It is difficult to tell just what is the status of the movement. The Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor recently reported "progress" in protective legislation for women in the States. Delegates to the current convention are equally certain that their cause is gaining strength. The Woman's Party legal research committee finds that equal rights measures have been enacted in 25 States and Territories, affecting more than 31,000,000 women.

But the great prize for which the Woman's Party is working is still far from their grasp. Their objective is an amendment to the Constitution which would nullify all legislation that makes distinction between the sexes. But the people are reluctant to amend the Constitution, and it appears that a long fight is still ahead of the women leaders. They have already collected $792,244 in their equal rights campaign, and it may be expected that solicitations and visits to Capitol Hill will continue.

The official male attitude may be described as a willingness to give the ladies anything they want, if they would only make up their minds about it.

REFORM OF LAW.

For all the criticism that has been leveled upon the law, legal processes and judicial machinery, very little progress has been made toward reform and improvement. Laymen, lawyers and the bench itself talk about what ought to be done, but it seems to be an almost insurmountable task to alter any essential elements. In addition, there does not exist a groundwork upon which a new structure can be erected. The law, to say nothing of legal processes and the judicial machine, has not been constituted in one fell swoop, but represents the slow development and growth of hundreds of years.

The Johns Hopkins Institute of Law now proposes to make of the State of Ohio a vast experimental field in which the effect of the law will be studied. With the cooperation of the State, which has granted an appropriation of $6,000 to assist in the work, the judicial council of Ohio, the State Bar Association and the university law schools in the State, investigators and scientists are to apply themselves over a period of years with the dual objective of improving the administration of justice and discovering and analyzing the actual effects of laws upon human beings. This year civil judgments of the common pleas courts, the courts of appeals and the supreme court will be analyzed. Later an analysis of divorce cases and criminal prosecutions will be made and an investigation of municipal court cases will be started. In addition, a study will be made of the whole method of assembling judicial statistics and a plan will be formulated for a comprehensive study of the machinery of justice.

As a result of this survey material should be in hand by which definite shortcomings in the law, legal processes and the judicial machine can be established. When it is completed, it should be possible to undertake the task of reforming and improving with a solid foundation of fact as a basis. Ohio may count itself fortunate that it has been chosen as the investigating field. The immediate effect of the survey should materialize in that State. But in its broader aspects, the survey should benefit all States as well as all individuals.

INTERSTATE BUS TRAFFIC.

The mere fact that 44 States now more or less strictly regulate bus traffic seems to indicate the need for Federal regulation of interstate bus traffic. It if were possible to obtain uniform State legislation with respect to the regulation of buses there would be little or no need for Federal regulation. Rates, safety requirements, &c., as established in any one State would meet the general requirement. But since it is impossible even to conceive of uniform State legislation, there seems to be no alternative to the Federal regulation of interstate bus traffic.

Representative Hoch, of the interstate commerce committee, suggests that it would be wise to draft such legislation at an early date. "While it may be debatable as to what extent the need may now exist for regulation of rates," he says, "particularly in view of the competition and potential competition from private cars, it might be wise to set up a certificate system to provide that no one can operate a bus as a common carrier in interstate business without securing a license that shall not be issued until there is a deposit of proper security or evidence of insurance protection against damages to person or property."

Representative Hoch believes that the protection should reach the matter of roadworthiness, the qualifications of the driver, and insurance that the contract of carriage will be fulfilled. The immediate effect of such legislation, he says, would be to "take off the road most of the fly-by-night, irresponsible operators."

Eventually, it can not be doubted, interstate buses must be made subject to regulation. Whether or not the time has now arrived remains to be proved. Representative Hoch outlines a fair bill, which should serve as an introduction to more comprehensive regulation and command the support of responsible bus operators.

FAITH IN THE FUTURE

From Printers' Ink.

During the last few days we have buttonholed business acquaintances by the dozen and asked them: "Would you say that American Telephone & Telegraph, Woolworth, Consolidated Gas and other prominent corporations whose securities are traded on the New York Stock Exchange have more or fewer registered stockholders today than they did immediately prior to the stock market crash?"

Invariably, the answer was an emphatic "fewer," and the estimates of the decline in the number of stockholders ran anywhere from 5 to 35 per cent.

As it happens, these guesses are totally incorrect. In so far as the more prominent corporations are concerned, and also with regard to many corporations not so widely known, their stock transfer books show more stockholders today, in most cases, than prior to the fall of stock prices.

American Telephone & Telegraph has a greater number of stockholders today than at any previous time in its history. Approximately 500 additions every day are helping to swell the total. The Pennsylvania Railroad reports a larger stockholder list than it has ever known before. Woolworth, which sent dividend checks to some 10,000 stockholders on June 30, sent checks to 19,000-odd on December 2.

And companies that probably would not be classed with the financial "blue chips," also report large increases. For example, the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. informs us that on August 15 it had 755 registered stockholders, while on November 30 the total was 993, an increase of some 30 per cent.

These figures to some may mean nothing more than that people who formerly kept stock at their brokers have had it registered in their own names and put it in their vaults. No doubt that is a partial explanation. But the increase in the number of registered stockholders is chiefly due to outright buying in small lots by investors throughout the country. The great middle classes stepped in, when the speculative element stepped out.

There is something inspiring in that. President Hoover has said "it is action that counts." The small investors of the Nation have acted. They have not merely said that it does not pay to be a bear on the United States. They have gone into the marketplace and demonstrated their faith in our commercial future in a manner that leaves no doubt of their sincerity.

Will manufacturers prove by deed—not merely by word—a similar faith? Will they back up their contentions concerning low inventory and unclogged channels of retail trade with undiminished sales and advertising campaigns?

The small investor has shown the way. More than ever before, our leading corporations are customer-owned. These customers who had money to buy stock at a time when money proverbially seeks a secret hiding place, also have money to buy their share of this Nation's output. Manufacturers who display by action their faith in the country's future will benefit equally with these small investors.

The thousands of odd-lot buyers invested their money in corporate securities because they had an abiding faith in the future of the country. They took it for granted that the executive heads of the corporations whose securities they bought possess a similar faith and will act accordingly. We have an idea they will not be disappointed.

JUST FOLKS

QUESTION.

A little garden and a friend or two,
A pleasant home where it is good to be;
Sufficient strength the daily task to do,
A hobby for the hours that may be free;
A song at evening or a book to read,
What more than these can mortal gain or need?

Why all the flourish and the show of wealth?
Why the great house with servants at the door?
Is magnitude a guarantee of health?
Does sorrow question which has less or more?
Is it worth while to struggle for the thing
Which in itself no happiness can bring?

A lifetime runs its course from birth to death.
Within its space some things a man can do,
But comes to all that last faint gasp of breath
And rich and poor alike pass out of view.
Once man has left the barren fields of need
Then piled up riches graver troubles breed.

Once gain enough and all the rest is vain,
But one can be the richest man of all,
Yet he must grieve, fall sick and suffer pain,
And when comes evening wait for friends to call.
If children bear his name, this risk he runs,
Gold is no guarantee of worthy sons.

The More You Place in the Show Window, the Less There Is in the Shop.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

SAM JONES was blessed with natural ability, a great appetite for hard work, and a yearning to accomplish something big.

That combination usually garners prizes, and in Sam's case it ran true to form.

He climbed from job to job with such amazing rapidity that he never had time to be proud of his position, and still ambition drove him on and a sublime discontent urged him to greater achievements.

It wasn't a selfish ambition. He didn't want money or power or place for its own sake. He worked and dreamed because his conception of a proper man's duty would permit him to do no less. He yearned to do big things because his standard of manhood required the doing of big things. He regarded selfish uselessness as the chief of shameful sins.

Then he met the one woman. He wooed and won her, and his love and pride combined in an effort to make her happy.

He thought her the most beautiful woman in town and wanted her to be the best dressed woman. He urged her to spend money freely. He bought jewelry for her. In his secret heart he wanted other women to envy her and other men to envy him the possession of her.

She was not slow to fall in with his plans. Within a year she had convinced herself that it was her duty to advertise his success. If she paid $5,000 for a coat the one motive she ackwnowledged was a desire to show the world that he could afford it.

There were other motives, however. Other wives were advertising the success of other men, and she found herself in competition with these. She began to have ambitions of her own. She yearned to show other women how insignificant they were compared with her.

Her husband, once the hero, became a mere means to an end—the source of supply for her personal campaigns. She spent all he made and asked for more.

Sam no longer yearned to do big things. He heard the cry for money until he dreamed of nothing else. Day and night he schemed and labored to get and get to satisfy his wife's ambitions. And he became a nervous, irritable, predatory creature who said "Yes, my dear" to his wife and had no interest in life except to make money.

When he broke down and was sent to a sanitarium, the great specialist felt his pulse and looked grave.

"You have a very serious disease," said he.

"Disease!" gasped Sam. "What disease?"

"It's a mental disorder," said the specialist, "called Americanitis."

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

NO NICKELS, MR. ROCKEFELLER.

John D. Rockefeller, arriving in Florida for his winter divot-digging, distributed nickels instead of dimes to the children there. How can President Hoover reconcile this with his statements that there is no reason to worry?

* * * *

The one mistake made by Mr. Hoover in his conferences on restoring confidence was his failure to invite Mr. Rockefeller to it. John D. probably wouldn't have relished the idea of hanging around golfless Washington, but he should have been handed a mashie-niblick and kept under observation until the sunshine drive ended.

* * * *

For the oil king to make a 50 per cent cut in his vest-pocket souvenirs at this stage of things was no psychological aid to Mr. Hoover. It looks bad.

* * * *

Mr. Rockefeller may say everything is lovely and that "My son and I are in the market now buying at these bargain levels," but when he begins passing out nickels instead of the proverbial dimes he throws manna to the skeptics.

* * * *

John D.'s dime distribution has become the best advertised activity in American history. When you see Rockefeller you think of bright, new shiny dimes and when you see a nice new shiny dime you think of Rockefeller.

* * * *

To hold out your hand and get a nickel from Ormond Beach's most famous golfer is like opening up the evening paper and discovering your favorite investment trust has passed the dividend.

* * * *

It is up to President Hoover to get in touch with John D. at once—even if he is on the fifth green about to sink a 4-foot putt—and urge him to get back on a 10-cent basis.

* * * *

When you have to see John D. twice to get as much money as you got last year in one trip it looks suspicious. A drop in the Rockefeller dime market frightens people almost as much as a drop in the stock market.

* * * *

Come, come, Mr. Rockefeller! Don't rock the boat. Make us all feel that Mr. Hoover is right and that there is nothing wrong with American prosperity.

* * * *

Put away those nickels!

* * * *

We want dimes!

YOU KNOW THE TYPE.

A broker is a funny guy,
And when the stocks are very high
He tells you "Now's the time to buy—
They probably will hit the sky."

But when they take an awful flop,
And for some bargains you would shop,
He urges caution, bids you stop
And says, "I'd wait until they drop."

President Hoover in his latest message to the business men of the country emphasizes "the good old word—work." "Yeah," bawls the man who is at the moment trying to change a tire, help the wife hang pictures, change a typewriter ribbon or set up the storm door.

"Get out of the huddle of conferences and play ball," urges Mr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. Not so fast, not so fast! Give the boys a chance to determine whether the next play is to be a punt, a pass or a smash at center.

Stocks are going up so nicely, it's almost time the ashman began giving tips again.

SOVIET HOLIDAY.

On the enthusiastic occasion of the twelfth anniversary of bolshevism, according to the account from Moscow, the Soviet government, "to bring the event closer to the hearts of the people * * * gave bread and meat at cost price to every member of the population holding bread cards." Joy was unbounded. The parade was 12 miles long, says the Portland Oregonian.

Meat at cost price. Real meat. And bread. Please do not forget the bread. Bread and meat at cost price to the holders of bread cards. After twelve years of benevolent bolshevism the Russians have attained to this most signal accomplishment—a square meal on the anniversary of the birth of the Soviet.

Quite often the Soviets tell us that they are getting along famously. On the evidence now afforded we are ready to vow they are, indeed. In another twelve years or so they may progress to pie.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Schools Should Be Made Beautiful—An Example of Ugliness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that Municipal Architect Harris gives a good account of his stewardship in his reply to Representative Simmons' charge of "serious administrative delay."

It has always seemed to me that there is serious legislative remissness in the matter of appropriations for Federal City school improvements.

One feature of the same I would like to touch on briefly, and that is the neglect to make appropriations large enough to cover the not very great extra expense that might be involved in beautifying public schoolhouses. If I were given autocratic power one of my first ukases would be to provide that special attention must be given to the erection of beautiful schoolhouses. The architect would automatically suffer capital punishment who was guilty of such common, unattractive school structures as are to be seen in Washington.

For instance, in the Mount Pleasant section, where I live, is the Bancroft School. It is a cheap brick structure, near-Spanish in appearance. By increasing the overhang of the eaves and substituting green tiles for light brown on the roof, with three or four Lombardy poplars on the west front, it would be transformed into a thing of beauty. And this at a cost of only a few hundred dollars.

As it stands today the best that can be said of it is that it looks like a rejuvenated car barn.

M. T. PLEASANTER.

Character Education Should Be a Rule in the Home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Charles H. LeFevre, chairman of the public schools committee of the Chamber of Commerce, in a recent radio talk voiced the views of the committee in well-deserved praise of the character education program of the Board of Education. In relation to the program, he said the committee is "interested also in making of the boys and girls of today men and women of tomorrow who will be good citizens and also gentlemen and ladies in the highest and best use of these terms."

As a by-product of his remarks the idea struck me that there may be some danger in new movements, even if they are good movements, when they distract attention from something else equally as good. For instance, in the discussion of public character education we should not lose sight of character education in the home. Understand this is not a "knock," for I am heartily in accord with the general purpose of the movement in question.

But, all the same, it would gratify me a good deal if some one would favor us with a radio talk on the "Home as a School of Good Citizenship."

Feed the Birds and Study Their Ways.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest the letter of "A. W. K.," which suggested the distribution of feed and suet for the birds. I live in Takoma Park and have considerable ground in my yard with several large trees and a pile of wood behind my house. Every winter a Carolina wren comes to the woodpile, and often on sunny days it entertains me with its beautiful song. Many birds visit my yard throughout the winter. I have seen as many as ten different kinds of birds in the trees at one time. These include the hairy woodpecker, nuthatch, brown creeper, junco, Carolina wren, ruby-crowned kinglet, purple finch, white-throated sparrow, blue bird and cardinal.

Feed the birds and they become your friends, and you learn to look forward to seeing them every day. I think it would be a good idea for the children in different schools who are interested in nature to form clubs and make it their duty to feed the birds in the woods, whenever it is possible for the members of the clubs to take hikes out into the country. Such clubs would enable nature lovers to study the habits of the birds, and they certainly have many peculiar and interesting habits.

BIRD LOVER.

What Is a "Model" City?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Inspired by talk about making Washington a "model" city, the question arises, What is a model city. It can not be answered, for the reason that the answer depends on the cultural viewpoint, with reference to the word "culture," in its dictionary application to "refinement of mind, morals or taste."

To say that a city is great or opulent or beautiful conveys a meaning more or less satisfactory to every one. But a "model" city in the sense here understood raises a conflict of opinions. Your model city may, for instance, be either too puritanical for some tastes or too wicked for others.

One man's meat is another man's poison. My model city may not be your model city.

New Orleans would not suit Boston as a model city.

Washington, as a model city, may not please Wayback or Hickville.

The model city of a Washington, a Jefferson, or a Lincoln might be Clarence True Wilson's Sodom or Gomorrah.

And so it goes. What we should do is to make Washington a better city, not a model.

Virginian Urges E Pluribus Unum to Join Methodist Board of Morals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In accordance with that old familiar adage, "Birds of a feather will flock together," I should like to suggest that Mr. E Pluribus Unum, whose letters appearing in The Post show that he is firmly of the opinion that every other person in the world should think, believe and act as he does, should immediately join the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals.

One does not have to dream or indulge in fancy imaginations to conclude what a congenial and happy affiliation this would be.

MRS. PANKHURST'S MEMORY HONORED

CONVENTION ENDS TODAY

That women must remember the tremendous responsibility, accept the restraints of good citizenship and realize the stabilizing force of religion in the life of a nation was the message brought by Miss Christabel Pankhurst, of London, daughter of the late Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, creator of militant suffrage, to the memorial service in her mother's honor in the United States Capitol yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the National Woman's Party.

Miss Pankhurst predicted that before long the English peeresses will get seats in the House of Lords, from which they are now excluded. "My mother lived to see suffrage triumph on both sides of the ocean," said Miss Pankhurst "and she was always glad she was able to help the women of America win their political freedom. She knew what the inspiration of American pioneer women suffragists such as Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton had been to English suffragists in their long struggle for the ballot. There has always been wonderful cooperation between American and English suffragists, and they have marched forward hand in hand, leading the women of the world to the land of equality and freedom."

Campaign Banners Wave.

Banners of many militant campaigns waved high yesterday in the picturesque procession which preceded the service held before the marble statue of the pioneers of women suffrage in this country, which reposes in the crypt chamber built for George Washington's body in the basement of the Capitol. Foremost in the line of march, after the American flag, borne high by Mrs. Victor du Pont, of Wilmington, was carried a historic banner of purple, white and green silk often used by Mrs. Pankhurst in England, in her fight for suffrage there. It was carried by Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Wilmington, daughter of the late Thomas F. Bayard, first Ambassador from the United States to Great Britain.

Then followed, as a guard of honor, 50 purple, white and gold banners of the National Woman's Party, borne by members of the Young Women's Council.

Twelve flower girls carrying garlands of purple, white and green colors of the Women's Social and Political Union, founded by Mrs. Pankhurst, walked before her historic banner.

British Representative Present.

A representaitve of the British Embassy was present to attest to the interest felt by the British government in the tribute to their countrywoman. A number of diplomats from other nations were also present, as well as many American officials and members of Congrses.

Mrs. William Kent, widow of Representative Kent, of California, presided over the meeting. After musical numbers by the United States Marine Band Orchestra and a quartet of singers, Mrs. Kent introduced Mrs. Donald Hooker, of Baltimore, who was the principal speaker.

"To all women Emmeline Pankhurst was the great emancipator of womankind," exclaimed Mrs. Hooker, while many of those in the audience wept openly. "We weep for her today because her passing is a great loss to the world. Her gift of franchise for the women of England and in our own land, where she helped that dream come true, freed the minds of women from the customs, traditions and restrictions that had held them in subjection for centuries. She taught women to ask for their rights as freemen, not to beg for them."

The memorial service was the climax of a three-day convention of the National Woman's Party, which was attended by hundreds of delegates from all parts of the country. The final sessions, mostly of a commitee nature, will be held today.

Delegates Take Part.

Many local and national organizations of women sent delegates to the memorial service.

The bearers of the National Woman's Party banners included the following:

Miss Barbara Sinclair, Miss Jennett Gover, Miss Ellen Russell, Miss Eileen Dent, Miss Evelyn Dent, Miss Ruth Mackay, Miss Lela Angleberger, Miss Jewell Newman, Miss Helen Wheeler, Miss Beryl Loughlin, Miss Miriam Grouchy, Miss Eula Russum, Miss Helen Louise Trembly, Miss Mary Bean, Miss Marion Hall, Miss Beulah Pond, Miss Minna Gill, Miss Virginia Hefy, Miss Georgella Hefty, Miss Lois Nichols, Miss Annabelle Day, Miss Yvonne Rapier, Miss Sarah Hobbs, Miss Virginia Eaton, Miss Bainbridge Boyle, Miss Celina Ferrer, Miss Josephine Ferrer, Miss Margaret Yokels, Miss Anna Mae Martin, Miss Edna Mutz, Miss Grace Russell, Miss Ruth Malone, Miss Myrtle Jones, Miss Rose Czechoiwicz, Miss E. Louise Bast, Miss Florence Carlson and Miss Emma Skrivanek.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

IN taking James W. Good's place as Secretary of War, Patrick Hurley inherits a feud, the bitterness of which makes the recent unpleasantness in France seem like cricket in comparison. This is with Representative W. Frank James, of Michigan, who is the new chairman of the House committee on military affairs.

Mr. James has been making life interesting, if not hectic, for the War Department for years. Until this session he has not been chairman of the military committee, but his predecessor, Mr. Morin, was not the enthusiast nor the crusader for reforming the War Department which Mr. James has been, and permitted his second in command almost to run the show.

Dating back to the Spanish War, when he was a private, Mr. James has had his doubts about the efficiency or any other particular merit, of Regular Army officers, and has made no secret of his views. Recently he has been commandeering Army airplanes, usually big three-motored planes, so as to make frequent inspections of the Army posts and defenses.

* * * *

ARRIVING at an Army post, Mr. James loses little time in discovering that things have not been going so well, from his point of view. This is especially true if there is any construction work going on, either of new defenses or quarters.

Immediately telegrams begin to burn the wires, or radios flash to Washington, informing the War Deparement that this or that is wrong and must be changed immediately. Frequently the Michigan member has issued orders to officers on the ground to stop certain work until further notice, rushing off a telegram to the Secretary of War or the chief of staff to have this order confirmed through official channels.

* * * *

NATURALLY, all this has not been gratifying to officials of the War Department. Nor has it been pleasing to the high ranking officers, especially in view of Mr. James' frankly expressed opinions as to the lack of imagination and intelligence of the average West Pointer.

Things reached such a stage that a ranking officer is said to have hung up his telephone receiver when he discovered that the party at the other end of the line was Mr. James. Which is not the way things are usually done in Washington—not between Army or Navy officers and high ranking members of influential committees on Capitol Hill.

Up until the time Jim Good went into the War Department, however, the resistance to James had been half-hearted. It was confined to uninformed officers, and did not percolate up through the civilian officials. Mr. Good, however, resented James' attempt to run the department from the House Office Building and made no bones about showing it. He held the idea that he was Secretry of War, and no member of a House committee was going to give him orders, even if he had served as a private in the days of 1898.

MR. JAMES continued to have trimotored planes assigned to him for his trips to Army posts generally, but the amount of changes he was able to effect began to shrink. Whereupon there was a real war. Up to that time he had been spanking the Army like a father anxious to improve the habits of his wayward child. But now he began to publish its deficiencies, as he considered them, to the world.

A resolution providing for a thorough investigation of the whole military establishment is one of the threats he has been hanging over the department, but the Army believes most of the members of the committee are on its side in the scrap, and that he would never be able to get such a resolution through. Army officers say James is just jealous of Senator Couzens, of his State, because Couzens gets so much publicity by baiting Mellon. So he has picked another Cabinet officer. And now Hurley is his target.

PRISONER EXCHANGE SOUGHT BY RUSSIA

This Action Seen by Moscow as Next Development in Negotiations.

STIMSON REBUKED AGAIN

Moscow, Dec. 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—An exchange of prisoners between Russia and China is regarded here as the next logical development from the negotiations between Moscow and Mukden for settlement of the Russo-Chinese dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway.

"We expect such an exchange to take place in the immediate future," one well-informed Soviet official told the New York World News Service's correspondent here today. "Release of arrested Soviet citizents must be the next step. Appointment of a manager for the disputed rialway will come second."

Asked whether, in his opinion, the present attitude of the Soviet toward the United States may postpone possible diplomatic recognition of this country by Washington, the government spokesman answered:

"We are not the kind to be frightened by the prospect in that respect. Moreover, recognition of the Soviet by theh United States already has been postponed for more than twelve years."

Soviet officialdom and the press today further rebuke Secretary of State Stimson for his explanation that the United States note to Russia and China was dispatched on November 30, whereas the Soviet-Mukden protocol was signed on December 3.

"Stimson should not justify his confusion of the situation by an incorrect explanation," official circles assert, at the same time pointing out that the basic exchange of letters between Moscow and Mukden took place November 27, and was published in the press November 28.

Government spokesmen emphasize that Stimson's note was supported only by England and France and a small number of lesser countries, which, excepting Mexico, have no relations with the Soviet.

Man Shoots Wife, Then Kills Self

Murder-Suicide Followed Double Family Row, Jury Hears.

Milledgeville, Ga., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Maurice E. Harrington, well-to-do planter, today shot his wife to death with a shotgun and killed himself with a pistol a few minutes later, a coroner's jury decided. Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Peace, neighbors, were charged with assault and battery for their alleged part in the family quarrel which preceded the slaying and suicide.

Evidence at the inquest was to the effect that Harrington had been out with Mr. and Mrs. Peace, that a quarrel arose between the women upon their return to the Harrington home near here and that the women fought.

The shooting occurred soon after Mr. and Mrs. Peace went home.

Mrs. Harrington, it was testified, had made plans to leave her husband.

Both Harrington and his wife had several children by former marriages.

Newsprint Price Is Parley Subject

Publishers Call Emergency Convention to Talk Over Situation.

New York, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—An emergency convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association will open tomorrow morning at the Hotel Pennsylvania to discuss the newsprint price situation.

Premiers of Ontario and Quebec have urged an increase in price by Canadian mills, some of which have announced an increase of $5 per ton for next year, bringing the price to $60.

The convention, to which publishers of all daily papers in the United States, whether members of the association or not, have been invited, is expected to protest against the pronouncements of the Canadian provincial officials.

The association has announced that Canada supplies more than half the newsprint tonnage consumed annually by American newspapers and that a general increase in price would mean a large addition to the cost of publishing newspapers.

Dry Law's Repeal Predicted by Wets

Nova Scotia Situation Was Like That in U. S. Now, Pamphlet Claims.

(Associated Press.)

Prohibition conditions in Nova Scotia a year before its recent repeal of its temperance act were likened yesterday by the association against the prohibition amendment to present conditions in the United States.

In making public a pamphlet, "Last Outposts of Prohibition," the association attributed reassurances given its agents less than a year ago that the Nova Scotia prohibition law "could not be upset" to "its backing by a bigoted church element, plus bootleggers, rumrunners and the people who wanted liquor prices kept down."

The recent rejection of prohibition in Nova Scotia was attributed to "the general ignoring of prescription regulations, the farce of prescription accounting, the prevalence of 'blind pigs,' extensive rumrunning, popular protection of bootleggers and the repeated nullification of liquor cases in the courts."

clared President Gifford. "The service begins today between the telephones in the United States and those on the Leviathan. Today we are reaching one ship. The service is new. But like all such developments in telephony we expect that it will spread from one ship to another until within a few years what is now a novelty will be a commonplace.

Under Haitian law only cable messages of plainly seditious nature are referred to the minister of the interior for censorship. Cable business has been brisk and telephone lines have shown a largely increased volume of business, so that any censorship necessarily would have been ineffective.

Despite this freedom of circulation of real information alarmist reports have circulated. One was that airplanes had bombed Aux Cayes without warning and had inflicted heavy losses. Another was that a Marine patrol had ambushed peasants without warning and taken a severe toll in killed and wounded.

Marines Controlled Fire.

As evidence that the Marines in their brush with natives who tried to force their way into Aux Cayes on Friday, had been in full control of their fire and had unusually fine discipline, the brigade commander today released an official report showing that the ammunition in the machine gun belt used to drive off the attacters was not exhausted. This was said to show that the Marines had fired only as long as the attacking band had pressed forward.

There have been three arrests here and one at Cape Haitien in the past 24 hours, with the prisoners charged with being strike agitators.

Salary Increase Given By Chain-Store Firm

New York, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Philip Anmuth, president of the Anmuth Corporation, which operates a chain of clothing stores in Eastern and Middle Western States, announced yesterday that all employes of the company had been given a 10 per cent salary increase, effective December 1.

Anmuth said the increase was made in accordance with President Hoover's suggestions for the stimulation of business.

NEW COURSE TAKEN IN ILLITERACY FIGHT

WILBUR MADE CHAIRMAN

(Associated Press.)

The advisory committee on national illiteracy agreed yesterday to urge the census bureau to make a complete record of illiterates in the United States in the 1930 census.

The committee elected Secretary Wilbur its permanent chairman, Commissioner Cooper, of the office of education, vice chairman, and Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, of Washington, secretary.

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, a pioneer in adult education through the medium of her famous "moonlight schools" in Kentucky, was selected chairman of a permanent executive committee to be selected by her and Secretary Wilbur.

Secretary Wilbur, in opening the conference, said the actual facts concerning illiteracy had never been adequately gathered and that the first purpose of the present study was to assemble facts. After they are assembled, the committee will be expected to recommnd remedies and methods which seem most likely to reduce illiteracy to the minimum.

A subcommittee, headed by Mr. Houston and composed of former Gov. Nestos, of North Dakota, and Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Georgia Institute of Technology, drew up a resolution which the committee as a whole adopted, declaring that illiteracy was a national problem and should be dealt with on a national basis.

SOCIETY MAN FACES GIRL'S $300,000 SUIT

Breach of Promise Claimed; Alienation Case Filed Against Aunt.

COURTSHIP IS RECOUNTED

New York, Dec. 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Mary Ryther, 30, who describes herself as a "working girl," of Saville, Long Island, has filed suit for $300,000, charging breach of promise against Henry R. Brevoort, it was disclosed today. Simultaneously a suit for alienation of affections brought by Miss Ryther against Mrs. Frances C. Lefferts, aunt of Brevoort, is pending in supreme court. The amount sought is not revealed, but it is understood to exceed $300,000.

Brevoort and Mrs. Lefferts live at the Hotel Drake here. There it was said Brevoort was out of town for a few days and Mrs. Lefferts was ill. Both have been in the social register.

The suit, which was begun secretly, came to light today when Burger & Burger, Miss Ryther's attorneys, made a motion in supreme court to examine Brevoort, Mrs. Lefferts and Miss Catherine A. Kenney, a nurse employed by Mrs. Lefferts.

Examination Date Fixed.

Justice Wasservogel denied the motion, but fixed December 10 as the date on which Miss Ryther's attorneys may examine Brevoort as to his "great wealth and social position."

"Miss Ryther in her complaint says she met Brevoort in 1922, and that after a short courtship he proposed marriage and she accepted. Until 1928, when the engagement was suddenly broken off due to their difference in social position, they exchanged many love letters, she set forth.

Brevoort, she said, had frequently visited her at her "humble home on Long Island, frequently dined with herself and family, and therefore knew her humble station in life."

Questioning Is Sought.

Miss Ryther asked the judge to let her attorneys question Mrs. Lefferts on "her action in persuading the defendant to break his engagement with the plaintiff because of her humble position in life and her action in objecting to the interchange of love letters between Miss Rythers and Brevoort."

The presence of Miss Kenney was asked so that she could be interrogated "as to certain things Brevoort said to Miss Kenney concerning the person of Miss Ryther."

Miss Ryther, in her suit against Mrs. Lefferts, charges that Mrs. Lefferts paid Miss Kenney various sums of money to help her break off the engagement.

Brevoort is 42, and a member of the Holland Society.

Mrs. Lefferts is the widow of Robert Lefferts, of East Moriches, Long Island.

Martinsburg Girl to Wed.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 8 (Special).—Announcement has been made here of the engagement of Miss Anna Thorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Thorn, of this city, and Attorney Lacy I. Rice, a prominent young local barrister and a member of the State Legislature. Miss Thorn is a former student of Wilson College, while her fiance is a graduate of West Virginia University.

Holiday Light Suggestions Offered for Contest Use

Artistic Effects Can Be Obtained With Colored Lamps Placed in Trees or About Verandas; Prizes to Reward Most Original Designers.

When the time comes to decorate your home for the Christmas season, and it won't be long now, the problem of what sort of artistic designs to use may puzzle residents of Washington who have not previously used outdoor electric lighting in their schemes of decoration.

The Washington Post and the Electric League of Washington, sponsors for a "Brighter Community Christmas" program in the Capital for which prizes have been offered, have the following suggestions to make in connection with the lighting of homes for the holidays.

1. Substitute a red lamp for the customary one in the entrance fixture and place a wreath around it.
2. Place electric candles in the Christmas wreaths in the windows.
3. Place colored lights in trees, either living ones on the grounds or cut trees in supporters.
4. Run strings of colored lights along the veranda.
5. Festoon strings of colored lights along the eaves of the house.
6. Place colored lights in flower boxes.
7. Place illuminated stars over the doors, on the roof or on the porch.
8. Use colored light entwined in wreaths or garlands and hung in windows or about the exterior of the house.
9. Decorate and illuminate Christmas trees.
10. Use colored lights, red and green, in twin sockets.
11. Use illuminated Christmas bells.
12. Illuminate the shrubbery on the lawn.

Still better, if you have original ideas regarding the lighting of your home, your lawn or your veranda, put them into effect, and it may be that your display will win the judges' attention because of its originality.

But no matter how elaborate you make the decorations at your home, don't forget to fill out an entry blank in The Post Electric League contest, because, if you do forget, the judges will not visit your home and your house will not be included in the list of those competing for the prizes.

A beautifully decorated home also will mean a lot of assistance to your community in striving to win the silver loving cup, which will be presented to the section which has the largest percentage of its homes decorated.

Former World's Champion Racer Succumbs to Old Injury.

Los Angeles, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Teddy Tetzlaff, 46, former world's champion automobile racing driver, died today at Rest Haven Home, Artesia, Calif.

Death was due, physicians said, to complications from a spinal injury received in an accident during a road race between Los Angeles and Phoenix, Ariz., in 1911. He drove for about three years after the accident, then gave up racing and came to Los Angeles, where he was successful in a garage business. Later, he operated a Hollywood service station, giving it up only when his health began to fail.

"Terrible Teddy," as he was known to race fans two decades ago, won the crown of speed king of the world in 1911 when he defeated Ralph de Palma in a 100-mile road race.

Jury Disagrees in Bribe Trial of Asa Keyes' Aid

Los Angeles, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Deadlocked eight to four, the jury trying Donald MacKay, charged with accepting bribes while chief trial deputy under former District Attorney Asa Keyes, was dismissed late yesterday. The foreman said it would be impossible to reach an agreement MacKay was charged with accepting $7,400 in bribes to obtain dismissal of fraud charges last year against A. I. Lasker, financier.

A new trial date will be set Monday.

Police Broadcast Plea To Arrest Young Sunday

Santa Cruz, Calif., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Santa Cruz police last night broadcast an appeal for the arrest of George M. Sunday, Los Angeles realty man and son of the evangelist.

Sunday was arrested here last month on a warrant sworn to by an Oakland automobile firm whose rented car had not been returned. He was released on $500 bail and his promise to report the following day. He has not reported yet, and today the $500 check he tendered as bail was returned to the police, unpaid. Sunday also is wanted in Los Angeles on a statutory charge preferred by his wife, who is suing for divorce.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Fire damaged the No. 1 hangar at Love Field and destroyed twelve airplanes in it last night, doing damage estimated by attendants at the field at $200,000.

It was the second fire at the field in two days, the storage building of the Dallas Aviation School having been burned yesterday with damages estimated at $30,000.

Are YOU Getting YOUR MONEY'S WORTH In Entertainment ?

The American people pay more generously for entertainment than any nation on earth. Their generosity has enriched the motion picture industry.

Spoken dialog has come to replace the subtitle of the silent picture. Tagging along with the talkie comes Mechanical Music—an economy.

Real Music is being ordered out of many theatres in favor of this new comer, who never dared a theatrical appearance until he gained the protection of the Talking Picture's novelty and the magic word "Synchronized." Now synchronization with a picture does not give Mechanical Music the quality of Real Music.

Banishment of Living Music represents a loss for the theatre patron. Is this loss balanced by the substitution of Mechanical Music?

A very great many theatre-goers will answer:

"NO!"

Then why should the aforementioned American people, who pay so generously for entertainment, be required to take less for their money than they were wont to get?

40th Anniversary

SINCE the American Security & Trust Company opened its doors to the public on December 9, 1889, great developments have been made in the inventive and business world. Fast-moving automobiles and giant aeroplanes supplant the horse-drawn vehicle, while the business of great organizations clearly indicates the industrial growth.

Keeping pace with the ever-developing progress that has been evidenced during this transitional period, the American Security & Trust Company has made an enviable record. Increased facilities to care for every phase of modern banking and trust functions have been employed. Newer ideas relating to sound banking practices are constantly sought.

Better methods by means of which the various departments might serve more efficiently are ever being devised. Friendlier business relations and a closer contact with the customers of the Bank are always an important aim. In fact, "Service" is the key word of the slogan for a greater organization.

Rising under the influences of a progressive age and at all times kept secure by policies of conservatism, it has assumed its place among the financial institutions as Washington's Largest Trust Company.

Double Role To be Taken By Musician

Ossip Gabrilowitsch Appears Over WRC Tonight; Schumann Program Scheduled; Post Brevities at 8:15.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch will appear in the double role of conductor and soloist when the Detroit Symphony Orchestra broadcasts over WRC during the Family Party at 9:30 o'clock tonight. The Detroit Orchestra, one of the most famous in America, was formed in 1914 by Weston Gales, its first conductor. He served until 1918, when Gabrilowitsch succeeded him.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, who is equally famous as a pianist, conductor and composer, was born in St. Petersburg in 1878. He studied the piano with Anton Rubinstein and Leschetizky, and had as teachers in composition Liadow and Glazounow, the great Russian composer now visiting this country.

The program details follow:

Overture to "Rosamunde" (Schubert), concerto (Schumann), a minor, intermezzo, andantino grazioso and the allegro vivace movements, the latter played as a piano solo by Mr. Gabrilowitsch; "Valse Triste" (Sibelius), "Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1" (Enesco) and "Les Preludes" (Liszt).

Choral and instrumental transcriptions of Robert Schumann's most famous piano pieces mark the all-Schumann program which the Salon Singers will broadcast at 10:30 o'clock from WRC.

Vocal and instrumental interludes add variety to a program leaning toward the classical which Harry Horlick and his A. and P. Gypsies will broadcast at 8:30 o'clock from WRC. Oliver Smith, tenor, offers "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and "The Dawn Brought Me Love and You" as his solos.

Other selections include "March Mignonne" (Poldini); "Mystery of the Night," (Denni); "Wedding of the Winds" (Hall); "Flapperette," piano duet; "Two Guitars," (Horlick); "Hungarian Dance No. 6" (Brahms); "Simple Aveu" (Thomas) 'cello solo; Medley of popular songs; "La Seduction" (Nocetti) and "Dance Hongroise" (Tschaikowsky).

There will be three speakers presented from WRC during the early part of the evening, the first during the program at 8:30 o'clock when Grantland Rice will be guest speaker in a sports revue. This program, regularly heard on Sunday evenings, has been transferred to Monday for this week only.

"The World Today" will be the topic of James G. McDonald at 7:15 o'clock, with William Hard scheduled to deliver his regular Monday evening discussion of what is "Back of the News in Washington" at 7:45 o'clock.

A concert by the United States Marine Band, under the leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson, will be broadcast from the Marine Barracks at 4 o'clock from Station WRC.

The roar of the fastest locomotives in America, speeding overland mail from St. Paul to the West Coast, will echo in loud speakers throughout the Nation as background for a swift drama of "The Fast Mail" in the Empire Builders program from Station WJZ at 10:30 o'clock.

A selection from Giacomo Puccini's first opera, "Le Villi," will be played by the Slumber Music String Ensemble under the direction of Ludwig Laurier during its broadcast at 11 o'clock from WJZ and KDKA. Aother selections include the overture to "Pique Dame," Suppe; "My Dream," Waldteufel; "In the Palace of Old Versailles," Fletcher; "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn," Godard, and "At an Old Trysting Place," MacDowell.

Fred Daniels, tenor, and Adele Vasa, soprano, will be heard as soloists during the Voice of Columbia program to be broadcast at 10:30 o'clock through WMAL. Miss Vasa will sing Arditi's "Il Bacio" and Mr. Daniels is to present Arne's "The Lass With the Delicate Air."

Henry Burbig will contribute another of his specialty numbers to the CeCo Couriers program at 8:30 o'clock. A tabloid version of the current revue at the Folies Bergere Theater in Paris will be presented to the radio audience during the program, "An Evening in Paris," from WMAL at 9:30 o'clock.

"Breakfast Brevities" from The Washington Post will be offered over WOL at 8:15 o'clock this morning. A new feature has been added to the program in the form of an organ recital at 12:30 o'clock, presenting Paul D. Gable.

Pherne Miller will deliver a short address on the life of Joaquin Miller, "poet of the Sierras," at 6:15 o'clock. Miss Miller is a niece of the poet.

Elsie Varle Lang, mezzo soprano, and Betty Bob in a skit known as "Home, Sweet Home," and Flash and Dazzle, the Pianoteers, are among other features for the evening.

By ROBERT D. HEINL

AN EXPLANATION offered yesterday for the terrific heterodyne whistle which may be heard here on Station WJSV was that it was caused by this station operating simultaneously on the same frequency with Station KSTP, at St. Paul. WJSV's transmitter is located at Mount Vernon Hills, Va.

It is also reported that there is a similar whistle on KSTP, a few miles out of St. Paul. Both are high-powered stations, each using 10,000 watts.

Mary Garden—the one and only—will be heard in the Victor Hour Thursday evening, December 19.

If the prohibition unit is still seeking additional evidence of the violation of the law, it is suggested that their agents provide themselves with radio sets and tune in on some of the hilarious parties being broadcast from night clubs and other places throughout the country, from 1 to 3 o'clock most any morning, preferably Sunday.

THE New Jersey State Funeral Directors Association has asked the Radio Commission that it be allowed to broadcast special funeral programs at a fixed hour every afternoon into which undertakers could fit their local services.

"Immediately following announcement by Station KFI that Harry Lauder would be broadcast again, cancellations, of tickets for Lauder's one-week stay at the Philharmonic Auditorium in Los Angeles began pouring in," Variety says, referring to Sir Harry's recent broadcast.

"Until the announcement, Lauder had been doing capacity. L. E. Behmyer, who booked him here on a guarantee and also has him for two weeks of one-nighters, also received squawks about cancellations from road managers."

Have you ever heard the announcer with the Southern twang, who says: "This is Station WRVA, Richmond, broadcasting at you folks!"

INTERFERENCE to radio sets in Southeast Washington has been reported to The Post by L. S. Barnes, of 227 Twelfth street southeast.

"It must be a generator or dynamo," Mr. Barnes said. "It breaks loose like the noise of about five sawmills and covers the entire dial."

Sometimes the stars are called temperamental when they are only trying to get what is absolutely necessary to make their performance go on right, according to Wendell Hall.

"I recall one time when Dolores Del Rio hadn't sung for radio for more than a year," he continued. "She was nervous, she had little self-confidence; said she couldn't understand why people wanted her to sing, because she knew she was not a good singer. In this mental state she wanted to face the wall and not people when she sang.

"We had to request a number of important persons sitting in front of the microphone to move to the back of the studio. They didn't like it—said that Dolores was temperamental. But, after all, was she?"

WE should like to enlist the cooperation of a few loyal souls in organizing the "Society for the Prevention of Broadcasting Government Annual Reports."

Patter from Station WAPI, Birmingham, Ala.:

Lady (at a bridge party): "I went into a store and saw one of those floor walkers you don't know whether to kiss or to kill. I said to him, 'I want something to match my complexion.'

"He looked at me hard and said, 'The leather goods are on the fourth floor.' (Aside) Look, dearies! There is Mrs. Hoosina coming to the party. She has just had her eyebrows plucked, that's what makes her look so surprised all the time."

What Today Means to You

"SAGITTARIUS."

IF December 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:35 a. m., from 7:40 p. m. to 9 p. m., and from 11:15 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., and from 6:10 p. m. to 7:15 p. m.

Trials and tribulations beset your pathway on this date, and the strength of your character will be tested. Shake off depression and look upward, the stars are still in the heavens. From a spiritual point of view the Astrological conditions are favorable.

The child born on this date will excel in figures and will have a natural business head. It will rise in the world through its mental gifts. It will be self-reliant, but not in the least conceited, and will have a very thoughtful and kindly nature.

You have a very strong character and the independence of your nature is self-advertising. You never seem to be carrying too heavy a load, physically or mentally, and for this reason you are seldom proferred assistance. You can not have a colorless life, as you are too vital, too positive and too fearless. On the other hand you are not destined to an easy existence. You like to preserve, as nearly as possible, freedom of both thought and action. People disapprove of you unequivocally, or are positively attracted to you. You are never received with indifference. Many are anxious to cultivate your good opinion, but you never "run after" any one. The scarifying style of your conversation interests, amuses or shocks people.

You speak the truth, no matter how destructive it may be of the preconceived notions of your listeners. If you be a woman, you will be understood much better by those of the opposite sex than by other women. If you be a man, you will be popular with those of both sexes on account of your wit and cleverness.

While you are not lazy, you do not like work of the plodding kind, and you become impatient if things do not move off with a "bang." You are a little inclined to sacrifice efficiency for the sake of speed.

Successful People Born December 9:

1—Joseph Peabody—Merchant of Salem, Mass.

2—Robert T. Paine, jr.—Poet and author.

5—Thomas Eglestone—Mining engineer.

6—Carlo A. Cappa—Musician.

Validity of Radio Act of 1927 Is Questioned by Act of Chicago Station Which Has Been Taken Before Supreme Court.

Questions which involve the validity of the radio act of 1927 and the authority of the Federal Radio Commission have been put before the Supreme Court of the United States by the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Seventh Circuit. If the replies are in the affirmative, the status of numerous broadcasting stations which held licenses under the Secretary of Commerce before the creation of the commission may also be affected.

The questions have been raised in the case of station WCRW, of Chicago, which appealed a decision of the Northern District Court of Illinois which denied the appellant an injunction to restrain the United States attorney and the Chicago radio supervisor from enforcement of penal provisions of the radio law against the broadcaster for violation of a Radio Commission order.

The appeal was based on a reduction in power ordered by the Federal Radio Commission for WCRW, which was one of the stations originally licensed under the Department of Commerce before the creation of the Radio Commission. The station's power was cut to 100 watts, whereas it formerly had 1,000 watts under the Secretary of Commerce.

The circuit court suggests that if the property rights of the broadcaster are established the radio act may be invalid in that it deprives a person of property without the due process of law, and just compensation, the only standards for the commission's action being "public interest, convenience, or necessity."

The case is Clinton White vs. George E. Q. Johnson and H. D. Hayes, Federal radio supervisors for Chicago. Ernest R. Reichman, of Chicago, is attorney for White. Copies of the brief will be filed with the Radio Commission today.

Apparently another armistice has been arranged in the war between Powel Crosley and the Federal Radio Commission. The last encounter was the commission's ordering Crosley's station, WSAI, at Cincinnati off the air, alleging that it had not been kept on its assigned frequency. However, after the station had been silent for about a month, Capt. Guy Hill, chief engineer of the commission, evidently decided to give the station another chance. Whereupon it was relicensed until the end of the present licensing period, January 31, at which time all radio stations will have to be relicensed.

Station WSAI was only one of a number of stations found off their frequencies, but the significance was attached to it because of previous difficulties Crosley had had with the commission.

Jane Interprets the Mode

Paris, Dec. 8.

BOTH sports and daytime dresses are rather short at the house of Bernard et Cie, the only concession to the new trend being on some of the dressier afternoon gowns, which dip at back and sides. Evening gowns, however, are definitely long.

An interesting line of tweed coats is shown, intricately worked, and often trimmed with astrakhan or skunk. The fur collars are usually small. Several duvetyne coats are shown.

The sport suits have tucked in blouses. Gowns for afternoon have belts, but blouse over them, with hips closely fitted. Crepe de chine is popular for afternoon wear, and lace is strong for both afternoon and evening, though velvet is most used for the latter.

At Mary Nowitzky's (to shift from the conservative to the daring), we find interesting negligees made like coats. One in green and gold lame is cut like the convent-nally tailored coat, but has a high Medici collar, the whole lined in orange velvet. Another negligee in pale blue satin has a closely fitting bodice and a very circular skirt trailing in the back. It is lined in rose.

An orange velvet coat has the trousers in printed crepe, while a cherry-red velvet coat is lined with green and has trousers in red, green and white stripes. The pajama top is close-fitting and sleeveless, of cherry-red satin. A pale mauve coat is lined with printed brown velvet, with blue and white flowers on a brown ground. The coat has revers showing the lining, and the trousers are of the same material.

Have you had photographs taken for Christmas? Don't you think you should color one or two of them for oh, very special people? You can, too. I'll just promise you that you can, and even though you may not be an artist; that is, if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet. I tell you not only what kind of things to use, but just how to apply them and then pad the paint down—as well as what colors to use for blondes, for brunettes, for Titian-haired people. It's interesting—better send for it.

Just the little unusualnes of the sleeve—the way the material is cut and joined—and the time-honored elegance of black velvet, lace trimmed—these made the Bernard et Cie, dress sketched for you today worth while—and worth our attention and yours.

Christmas Gift Suggestion.

Do your miscellaneous heroes purloin your lovely handkerchiefs? For souvenirs? Oh, all in the name of romance, of course, oh, yus, yus, yus! 'N'it doesn't seem to make any neverminds to them at all whether it is a lovely thing cornered in priceless lace or a little hunk of inexpensive chiffon.

That, in the final analysis, is a truly nice gift for a fastidious lady—after all thinking you've been doing on the subject of a gift for her, why not a really lovely assortment of handkerchiefs? And I say "assortment" advisedly—really shop for them, and select the different sizes and colors you think will please her.

You're reading, of course, the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Washington Post. It appears each Suhday.

VENTILATION OF OFFICES.

A GENTLEMAN who signs himself "Humble Office Worker" asks for an article on the heating and ventilation of large offices, rooms occupied by large numbers of people doing sedentary work and closely limited locations, for instance, an office occupied by many typists, each spotted in a given location.

The problem arises more from the shortcomings of methods of heat distribution than from any other cause. Under present methods the temperatures of a large room will vary from 10 to 30 degrees in different locations. The ceiling level is many degrees higher than the floor level. If the room is double-decked, those who work in balconies may be in air at 80 while those on the main level may have their feet level bathed in air at 60.

Those who work at typewriters spotted near the heat may work at a temperature of 75, while those anphored near a window may have to put up with one of 60. If the room is heated by a stove, regardless of the fuel, the currents from the doors and windows to the combustion chamber increase the discomfort. If there is an open fireplace the room may have a comfy, homelike air, using the word in one sense, but used in another, it is most uncomfortable. In fact, in such a room, those who work next the window must depend on profanity for comfort.

The job must pay the penalty for a high degree of discomfort among the employes. If temperatures are too even, and particularly if the air is warm and dead, attention must lapse and energy must lessen. Under such circumstances the volume of accomplished work lessens and accuracy diminishes. On the other hand, if the air is too cold and drafts too strong, above all, if the head is hot and the feet are cold, the attention is distracted and there is even a greater loss in correctness, accuracy and energy applied to work. The problem of heat distribution within rooms has received scant attention from ventilation engineers. It is worthy of more study than it has ever received.

MISS M. G. LEARNS SOME HING.

Miss M. G. writes:

1. What food value if any is there in orange or lemon skin?
2. Is it harmful to eat them?
3. Does smoking spoil a singing voice?
4. Does the use of a fine comb injure the hair in any way?
5. Does the act of preserving oranges in marmalade, detract from their healthful qualities—laxative tendency and vitamins?
6. My arms and legs are covered with red spots which itch very badly and are smaller than a dime in size. Could these be insect bites caused by sitting on the grass?
7. I have been in the habit of rubbing a wet piece of good toilet soap under my arms after a bath. This counteracts effectively the odor of perspirations and I never use any chemical preparation for this purpose. What harm?
8. Do tea and coffee incline one to puffiness? I mean when included in a fair amount in the reducing diet.

REPLY.

1. None.
2. The aromatic oils act as condiments and are somewhat harmful.
3. I doubt it.
4. It irritates the scalp a little too much.
5. I don't think so.
6. I guess so.
7. None.
8. No.

SUNLIGHT WILL DO GOOD.

L. S. writes: My family has the itch, and some members are being cured with sulphur ointment, &c.

1. Please say how long woolen garments which can not be washed will be infected.
2. Are books used by my children dangerous to others?

REPLY.

1. It may be necessary to kill the parasites in these garments by the use of dry heat. Try sunning them (bright, direct sunlight) for one week.
2. Probably not. Expose them to bright sunlight, however.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Old Ideas of the Earth.

IT is hard to realize that the earth is round. When we travel a thousand miles, it does not seem as though we were going around a great curve. Yet we know that ships have often gone "round the world," and only this year the Graf Zeppelin flew around.

Idea of how the earth was held up, as held by people in India long ago.

Most of the olden Greeks believed that Greece was near the center of a flat world. They taught their children that there was an "ocean river," which ran around the sides of the world. They said that the sun was a god who drove his chariot across the heavens once each day.

At night the sun god was supposed to return to the east by a northern route. People could not see him, it was said, because he was hidden by a high range of mountains in the north.

One Greek thinker, who had rather a long name—Anaxagoras—said that the sun was not a god, but was a ball of fire. He said that it "might be as large as the whole of Greece." For teaching those things, this thinker was driven out of the country.

Other Greeks made guesses about the shape of the earth. Aristotle said that the earth must be round, like a ball. One of his reasons was the round shadow on the moon, when there was an eclipse. He thought that the shadow was caused by the earth, and he was right.

The ancient Egyptians used to think that the sun was carried across the sky in a boat. Since the Egyptians saw many boats in the Nile River, it was natural for them to think of a boat as carrying the sun. But it would have had to be a very large boat—the sun is 866,000 miles from side to side!

People in olden India tried to guess what held the earth up. It was a common belief that the earth rested on the backs of huge elephants. The elephants were supposed to stand on the shell of a giant turtle. When there was an earthquake, they thought that the elephants or the turtle were shivering or shaking.

By FRANCES M'DONALD

"He Loves Me—He Loves Me Not!"

DEAR Miss McDonald: He is 28, handsome and popular. We both were in love with each other. Then he went away. When he came back he acted very cold and seemed uninterested in me. Since then I refused him when he called and only see him now at places where I go. He is always with a girl and speaks to me.

Recently I met him and he insisted that he still loved me. He brought the subject up and I tried to act cold, but somehow I couldn't, for I love him dearly. My girl friends tell me that he talks to them about me, criticizing me. I don't think that's right of him, for if he has anything to say about me why shouldn't he tell me?" He has promised to call on me, but never did. He is very conceited. Also, he has asked me to write him, as I did when he was away, to tell him what I think about him, and he in return would answer and tell me how much he loves me. I can not make him out, why he asks this and I want you to help me. How can I win his love, for he used to love me once, and now I have a feeling he doesn't.

Will you please tell me what to do and how I should act toward him? Thanking you ever so much, I am.

BELLA.

Write him and tell him that you fear you have lost interest in him. When you meet be as sweet and natural as ever, and when he talks of love assure him that you have at times felt you cared for him, but your interest seems not to last. There is no better treatment for a severe case of conceit complicated by symptoms of waning interest on the man's part.

Meanwhile, there's a good deal of joy in the world. Get your share. And a good many men in the world. Get your man. And never allow any man to tell you the idea that "50" is the eighth wonder of the world, or indispensable to your happiness.

Men at their very best are just nice, comfortable pests that one gets used to, or nice love-making persons who make life more livable, or solid close-to-earth individuals that understand and tolerate tantrums, but never are they indispensable to any really first rate, intelligent woman, so do not put up with them when they are even halfway unsatisfactory. Their mission is to take care of woman and smooth her way through life. Failing that, they have no mission whatsoever, so leave them to their pipes!

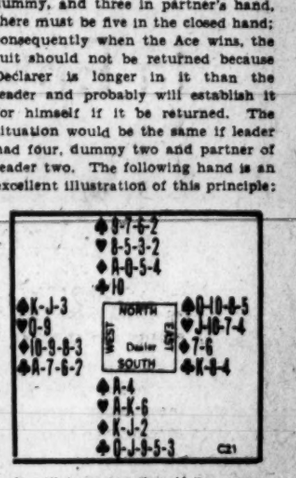
WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the bridge novice.)

WHEN the beginner at Auction or Contract Bridge learns the Rule of Eleven, he sometimes overlooks another point in connection with the lead which is still more important.

A future article will deal with applying the Rule of Eleven; but today the more important question relating to the initial lead will be considered.

When the original leader starts with a small card, he usually is leading his fourth best; he surely is doing so when leading against a No Trump if his partner has not bid, and if No Trump was the first bid made by the Declarer. When the partner can tell that the leader has led his lowest, it is evident that the lead was made from exactly four cards. For example: when the lead is the Deuce, or when it is the Trey and the Deuce is in dummy; or when the Four is led and the Deuce is in dummy and the Trey in partner's hand, the partner knows that the leader did not hold more than four because his fourth best was his lowest. It is generally good play to return partner's suit; but the knowledge that partner opened a four-card suit is a reason for not returning it when it is apparent that the closed hand has more than four cards of it. Suppose the original lead against a No Trump should be a Four of Clubs, that dummy has the singleton Trey, and the leader's partner the Ace-Nine-Deuce. With four Clubs in the leader's hand, one in dummy, and three in partner's hand, there must be five in the closed hand; consequently when the Ace wins, the suit should not be returned because Declarer is longer in it than the leader and probably will establish it for himself if it be returned. The situation would be the same if leader had four, dummy two and partner of leader two. The following hand is an excellent illustration of this principle:



It will be noted that if East return his partner's Clubs after winning the first trick, Declarer will go game (making one Spade, two Hearts, four Diamonds and three Clubs—four-odd); but if a shift be made to Spades, game will be saved, East and West making three Spades and two Clubs.

Constantinople Crashes Laid to Love and Lunacy

Constantinople, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Insanity and love affairs were blamed today by Mazhar Osman Bey, a leading alientist here, for the alarming number of automobile accidents in the city involving taxicab drivers. The prefecture took the alienist's diagnosis so seriously it announced periodic examinations for the drivers, stating that mentally unbalanced chauffeurs would be sent to asylums.

The alienist said the tax drivers' insanity was due to alcoholism and use of drugs. The love affairs were attributed, in part, to the glamour imparted by the chauffeurs' uniforms which were said to be as effective in winning feminine hearts as are the brass buttons of American policemen. The alienist said the taxi men's flirtations while driving and quarrels caused by mutual jealousy caused many accidents.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

Though ever so many beautiful girls parade and pose in Earl Carroll's "Vanities," parked at the National, Mr. W. C. Fields, the droll gentleman with the mustache, completely dominates the show. Thus works the law of compensation.

Without Mr. Fields, his mustachios and his skits, the seventh edition of Mr. Carroll's revue would be just so many beautiful girls, parading and posing, with a flash number now and then. After all, beautiful girls are just beautiful girls, but, then, every man to his humor.

From the headquarters of things theatrical the story comes that this particular entertainment is the one and only revue on the boards or, perhaps, on the road. Well, rere it is in all its glory, and a right dashing show, too, with speed and pep, and novelty numbers enough to spur up interest whenever interest seems to lag—which is seldom.

In the past Earl Carroll has managed to give the theater many a hand-revue. His seventh edition of the "Vanities" is no let-down, though the old order still obtains—a flash of fair femininity, a song, an acrobatic dance or two and a skit with W. C. Fields. There are several novelty numbers that beggar description, as the oft-quoted phrase has it. One in particular, the opening of the second act, stands as a shining mark, "The Gates of the Foundry," is an idea somewhat after the fashion of the Robots in "R. U. R.," a dance description of the era we live in—the machine age.

The featured beauty this year is no less a personage than "Miss Universe" herself, Miss Dorothy Britton. Then, there are several unusual dancers, Theodore, Enrica and Novello, along with several of the Bennett boys—Al, Joe and John—and Ben Blue, a comic on the order of Charlie Chaplin and a couple of other fellows, when he feels in the mood for versitility. For that song hit, "Once in a Lifetime," and a very catchy number it is, too, the Carrolls have engaged Paul Russell, a singer of sweet notes.

All of these are the trimmings. First, last and all the time is that fellow Fields—with his comedy concoctions. One, alas, smacks of gag taste. All is forgiven, however, when the old gentleman trots out some of his real stuff; notably, that scene in the dentist's office, the peanut vendor, and a screamingly funny skit, "On the Links." Some of the pewholders, at the opening services, on the Sabbath, came mighty nigh falling out of their seats, convulsed with laughter.

Earl Carroll has not lost his knack of staging spectacles, as witness several of the so-called flash numbers. These, and Fields, and the beautiful girls, prevent ennui at the "Vanities."

GAYETY

At Jimmy Lake's Gayety Theater, the popular Hebrew comedian, Harry Steppe, leads his own show.

Betty Abbott, featured woman, continues with her fat and snappy work, and inspires the rest of the cast to such enthusiasm that Gayety-goers see the best show this season.

A couple of pretty blonde-haired sisters, Dolores and Helen Green, popularize themselves in their number.

Frances Knight, personality kid, considered the find of the Mutual circuit, makes her initial debut and brings down the house. Miss Knight became one of the stars of yesterday's performance.

Helen Holmes, "Broadway Rose," was forced to take several encores, as was Rube Walman, who participated in a whistling number.

A good-looking chorus adds to the show.

The Gayety Theater, on Thursday night at 11:30, will be the scene of Jimmy Lake's Midnight Ramble, which will introduce 75 celebrated performers.

Prayers Said Daily for His Party, Explorer Is Told by Rt. Rev. Freeman.

Prayers are said daily in Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral for the safety and speedy return of Commander Byrd and his valiant men the intrepid explorer was told over the radio yesterday afternoon by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, at the people's evensong, held in the chapel.

Bishop Freeman prefaced his regular sermon with the talk to Commander Byrd in Little America, where, it is said, the Bethlehem Chapel Sunday afternoon services are frequently picked up by the radio experts with the expedition. The bishop told Commander Byrd that these special prayers are being said at the request of relatives of men with the expedition. The service was broadcast as usual over WRC.

Bishop Freeman was in the pulpit at the people's evensong yesterday after absence in the South, where he has made several addresses in New Orleans and spoke in Trinity Church last Sunday in that Southern city.

THREE HELD GUILTY IN RUM CONSPIRACY

Six Defendants in Indiana Liquor Plot Freed; Jury Disagrees on Eight.

POLICEMAN IS CONVICTED

Hammond, Ind., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The first of the Federal Government's liquor conspiracy cases in northern Indiana resulted today in the conviction of three men, one of them a policeman and the other two alleged liquor distributors, and the acquittal of six defendants classed by the prosecution as "minor bootleggers."

The jury, reporting at 5:30 a. m. after deliberating more than twelve hours, disagreed on the remaining eight defendants, seven of them members of the Gary (Ind.) police force. Those convicted were Charles Wampler, motorcycle officer, and two alleged bootleggers—Sandro Necco and Alexander Santi.

Six Who Were Acquitted.

The six men acquitted were John Romano, Frank Kish, Frank White, Frank Marshall, Albert Smelko and Joe Sannicola.

The jury disagreed on Thomas Galasith, of Gary, attorney who sometimes served as a special judge, and on seven Gary policemen: Lieut. Frank Galloway, Robert Bock, John Papp, Roy Keele, Henry Prohl, Bud Ingersoll and Oscar Salzman.

The trial was one of three growing out of a Federal grand jury investigation of law enforcement conditions in northern Indiana. The three men found guilty were named by the prosecution as the "key men" in the conspiracy.

Sentence Date Not Set.

The district attorney had stressed the importance of Santi and Necco and the policemen in the alleged conspiracy, asking the jury to acquit the "minor bootleggers unless you can find the policemen equally guilty."

Judge Thomas W. Slick, of South Bend, did not set a date for sentencing the three men, but he indicated it would probably be next week.

Prosecutors said the eight men on whom the jury disagreed today may have to face trial again, along with four or five others originally named in the conspiracy, but never arrested or several others released during the trial.

Babcock to Tell Of Atom Studies

Carnegie Physicist Will Describe Experiments With Light.

Dr. Harold D. Babcock, physicist of the Mount Wilson observatory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Beyond the Red in the Spectrum" at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night in the institution's administration building, Sixteenth and P streets northwest. The lecture is announced open to the public, with admission by tickets obtained from the institution to the extent of the limited seating capacity.

Dr. Babcock, one of the best-known men in his profession in the United States, will discuss recent advances made in the study of the atom in other technical phases of his work. At the same time the institution announced an exhibition representing results of research activities to be held next Saturday, Sunday and Monday, from 2 to 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and from 7:30 to 10:30 o'clock at night at the administration building.

Thief Breaks Window; Takes Six Pair of Shoes

Smashing a show window with a brick, a thief early yesterday morning stole shoes valued at $60 from the William Hahn & Co. shoe store, Seventh and K streets northwest, according to a report made to the police of the First Precinct by Abe Donin, manager of the store. The loot consisted of six pairs of men's oxfords.

Julian Pouget, of 612 F street northwest, proprietor of a restaurant at 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, reported that his place of business was entered yesterday by breaking a window, and a quantity of ice cream and cigarettes stolen.

Silver Years

By Gertrude S. Trowbridge

"After the Golden Years of Youth, Come Those of Fine Silver."

A shift from early life to late years does not mean giving up everything to which we are accustomed although the mourner's bench implies nothing less. Nature contradicts that by spreading her gifts impartially before all ages. Because a person is older, the sun, moon, and stars do not stop shining nor flowers, skies, or seas lose their exhilirating beauty. In fact, youth is often blind to marvels in nature that thrill older people. Titian painted his best picture when over 90 and other painters did superb color work when very old. As for pets, canaries prefer owners old enough to remember to feed them and cats and dogs run from children to those who no longer enjoy pulling tails.

If we have had useful parents and expect efficiency from our young people, we can not be a weak link in the chain. We have many inherited values to hand down intact and rank growths of rubbish to destroy for everyone. This we can not do unless we have lived long enough to know what is worth preserving.

No life ever seems long enough for fulfillment so its years should have definite plans that conserve power. There is always suffering to be alleviated and constructive help given. So no one should abdicate unless helpless. Society needs courage, reliability, spirituality, kindness, poise, and tact, all of which age can contribute. Also, we should not miss any stimulating, interesting adventures which deepen and enrich our own lives. "Work keeps people going; full of spring and resiliency."

With the right spirit, we can do a great thing. We can free the young from dread of age. But that we can not do unless we develop in ourselves every germ of loveliness that we can discover. Nothing preserves self-respect as surely as holding ideals; and we loathe ourselves if we let them slip.

There are always crowds before Whistler's portrait of his placid mother whose face and figure suggest comforting ways, refinement, and blessedness. She appeals more in her severe simplicity than if she wore a tiara and carried a pink feather fan.

Six New Cars Ordered For Fast Boston Train

Work has just been started by the Pullman Co. on six new parlor cars and two new observation cars, which will be used in "The Senator," the Pennsylvania Railroad's 9½-hour flier between Washington and Boston. This equipment is expected to be completed in March and will be placed in service immediately after delivery.

The parlor cars will receive the following names: Caleb Strong, John Langdon, Oliver Ellsworth, Philip Schuyler, Paine Wingate and Tristam Dalton. All these men were United States senators in the First Congress, 1789-1791, which ratified the Constitution.

On the Rules of Traffic

By WILLIAM ULLMAN

"Three times and out" may be true of many things but with regard to speeding offenses in Washington it is "three times and in—jail."

The law reads " * * * upon conviction for the third offense or any subsequent offense, such individual shall be fined not less than $100 nor more than $500 and shall be imprisoned not less than 30 days nor more than one year."

There is no "or" about the imprisonment provision. The Traffic Act reads "and." The court has no discretion in imposing such a penalty.

Example: A driver has been arrested and convicted on two charges of driving 25 miles in a 22-mile zone. Not very serious misdemeanors, but a third offense of speeding at 25 miles an hour would bring a mandatory jail sentence.

Autopsy Is Held On Radium Victim

Mrs. Quinta McDonald Is First of Six Stricken by Poison to Die.

New York, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—An autopsy today established that radium poisoning was a contributory cause of the death yesterday of Mrs. Quinta McDonald, of Orange, N. J., one of six women poisoned by radium in a New Jersey factory several years ago.

Mrs. McDonald, the mother of two children, died at Memorial Hospital, where she had been a patient for 10 weeks. She and the five other women were poisoned by using their lips to point brushes with which they painted luminous watch dials.

The autopsy was performed today by Dr. Harrison S. Martland, chief medical examiner of Essex County, N. J., and was witnessed by Dr. Charles A. Norris, chief medical examiner of New York City, and other physicians of city departments. The findings were described as of the greatest scientific interest.

American Business Declares War . . . . against X

Last week's conference at Washington turned the spotlight upon . . . and furnished the background for this fifth NATION'S BUSINESS advertisement about . . . the powerful external forces, personified by X, that control modern business!

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 400 business leaders, representing more than thirty industries, met at Washington and literally signed a "Declaration of *Inter*dependence!"

This Conference, called at the request of President Hoover . . . and held under the auspices of the United States Chamber of Commerce . . . is a significant step forward in industry's organized effort to combat the powerful external forces that control American business today.

Modern business is so complex that each industry depends upon all others. Conditions in industries outside your own are the dominant external forces that retard or accelerate your business today! They are infinitely more powerful than the internal factors you control!

Consider this case . . . which has a thousand actual counterparts!

Suppose the business of a grocer in Globe, Arizona, suddenly falls off. He investigates and finds that his customers . . . men in the mines . . . are working in shorter shifts.

"Why?" he asks. And the mine operators reply that they are slowing up copper production because orders aren't coming in from the electrical manufacturing industry.

"Why?" he repeats. And electrical manufacturers point to delay in orders for equipping new power plants.

"Why?" And the power company operators say that blue prints are drawn, contracts are ready, money is in the bank . . . but they must wait for governmental action.

So, while the grocer in Globe, Arizona . . . and all industries down the line are wondering "What's wrong with business?" . . . their continued well-being awaits the stroke of a pen in a distant city! A powerful external force they can't control!

That's only one example. Consider ship building . . . and the literally hundreds of industries dependent. And American ship building at the moment awaits a decision regarding mail contracts! Another instance of external forces at work!

Today, the problem of interrelated industry is greater than the problem of any single group. Indeed, it is the real problem of every industrial unit!

Through chambers of commerce and trade associations . . . through such conferences as last week's at Washington . . . American business is solving this problem. By cooperation!

More than 310,000 alert executives depend upon NATION'S BUSINESS to give them a clear picture of the whole industrial movement. It is . . . and always has been . . . edited to give you constant contact with these powerful external forces . . . forces that American industry, by its "Declaration of Interdependence" at Washington last week, officially recognized!

LEGAL NOTICES

TO: The SON of Florence Emery Georger, Deceased (nee Florence Emery), and Francis Frederick Georger, Deceased, whose name is unknown and cannot be ascertained, and who is alleged to have been born in Washington, D. C., on or about February 11, 1895;
The ISSUE OF SAID SON, if said son is deceased;
The PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES AND WIDOW OF SAID SON, if said son is deceased;
VIVIAN E. CORNELIUS;
JAMES E. NICHOLSON;
ALL PERSONS WHO MAY CLAIM AN INTEREST IN THE TRUST ESTATE hereinafter mentioned, established by the Eighth Article of the Last Will and Testament of WILLIAM E. EMERY, Deceased, late of Flemington, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, and

ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

TAKE NOTICE that on the 2nd day of October, 1929, pursuant to the provisions of an Act entitled "An Act relating to testamentary trusts," approved April 29, 1929, a petition was filed in the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, with the Clerk of said Court at his office in the State House, Trenton, New Jersey, by Bankers Trust Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, as substituted trustee under the Last Will and Testament of William E. Emery, Deceased; that the substance of the allegations contained in said petition is as follows:

That William E. Emery died a resident of Flemington, in the County of Hunterdon and State of New Jersey, on October 12, 1912, leaving a Last Will and Testament which was duly admitted to probate by the Surrogate of Hunterdon County on October 22, 1912; that on said 22nd day of October, 1912, Letters Testamentary were issued by the Surrogate of the County of Hunterdon, to the testator's wife, Elizabeth S. Emery, and to William H. Porter and George B. Case, who were named in said Last Will and Testament as Executors thereof and Trustees thereunder.

That the said William E. Emery left him surviving his said wife and two daughters, viz., May E. Cornelius, who then resided at Sri Wood, Windlesham, Surrey, England, and Florence E. Georger, the former wife of Francis Frederick Georger, who then resided at Valcour, in the State of New York.

That the said Executors filed their final accounts on March 14, 1914, in the office of the Surrogate of the County of Hunterdon, which accounts were approved by decree of the Orphans' Court of Hunterdon County on April 6, 1914.

That the Eighth Article of the said Will provides as follows:

"Eighth: I give and bequeath to my Trustees, herinafter named, and to their survivors and survivor, successors and successor, the sum of Six Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($650,000) upon the following trusts: To receive, hold, invest and from time to time reinvest and keep invested said trust fund of Six Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($650,000), and to receive the rents, issues and profits thereof, and pay the net rents, issues and profits thereof, in equal proportions to my said daughters, Florence Emery Georger and May Emery Cornelius, during their lives, and upon the death of either of my said daughters to pay one-half of the said net rents, issues and profits unto my surviving daughter during her life, and to pay the remaining one-half of the net rents, issues and profits in equal shares to the issue of my deceased daughter during the life of my said surviving daughter, or failing such issue, to pay the whole of said net rents, issues and profits to my surviving daughter during her life, and upon the death of both of my said daughters I direct that the principal of said trust fund of Six Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($650,000) be paid and transferred as follows: One-half thereof to the issue of each deceased daughter, per stirpes and not per capita, the issue of any deceased child to take the share that his, her or their parent would have been entitled to if living; but if issue then survive of but one of my said daughters, I direct that the whole of the principal of the said trust fund of Six Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($650,000) be paid and transferred unto such issue, shared and share alike, the issue of any deceased child of my said daughter to take the share which his, her or their parent would have been entitled to if living; and in case my said wife shall survive my said two daughters and all their issue, then and in that event, on my death, I direct my said Trustees to pay one-half of said trust fund to my said wife if living, which in that event I give to her absolutely, and to pay the other one-half of said trust fund to the person or persons who would as my next of kin or their representative receive the same according to the present laws of the State of New Jersey, if I had survived my wife and my issue and died intestate possessed of said property; but in case both of my said daughters shall die without leaving issue who shall survive the death of my surviving daughter, and my wife shall not then be living, I direct that one half of said trust fund of Six Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($650,000), shall be paid to the person or persons who would, as my next of kin or their representatives receive the same according to the present laws of the State of New Jersey, if I had survived my wife and my issue and died intestate, possessed of said property, and the other one-half of said trust fund to the person or persons who would as her next of kin, or their representatives, receive the same according to the present laws of the State of New Jersey."

That said trust mentioned in said Eighth Article was duly established by the Trustees as therein provided.

That the said Elizabeth S. Emery and William H. Porter, two of the Executors and Trustees under said Will, are deceased and that George B. Case, the other Executor and Trustee, has resigned, and has filed his account as such surviving trustee and has transferred the funds held by him as such surviving trustee to the above mentioned Bankers Trust Company, which has been appointed as substituted trustee and which is now executing said Trust.

That the above mentioned May E. Cornelius died on July 2, 1926, leaving Vivian E. Cornelius as her only issue her surviving.

That the above mentioned Florence, former wife of Francis Frederick Georger, was secretly married under the name of Florence Baker to the said Francis Frederick Georger under the name of Fred Fr. Gray, on July 15, 1895, and thereafter on the 25th day of September, 1895, was publicly married under her own name to the said Francis Frederick Georger under his own name; that on or about the 10th day of February, 1910, the said Florence was divorced from the said Francis Frederick Georger; that thereafter she married one Henry B. Billings, and died on the 21st day of August, 1928; that no issue was born of said marriage of said Florence and Henry B. Billings.

That said Bankers Trust Company, the petitioner in said petition, has been informed and believes that on or about the 11th day of February, 1896, the said Florence E. Georger, gave birth to a male child at a private hospital (the name of which is unknown to said petitioner) located near the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C.; that she was attended at said time by a Doctor Walsh, whose first name is not known with certainty by said petitioner; that at said time the said Florence E. Georger and the said Francis Frederick Georger were in Washington, D. C. under the assumed names of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gray; that said child, within a few days after its birth, was given by the said Francis Frederick Georger to a woman said to be named Sophie Landgraf, with instructions to find a home for the said child under such circumstances that its identity as the child of the said Florence E. Georger and the said Francis Frederick Georger should not become known; that the said Sophie Landgraf took said child from the said hospital and thereafter the said Florence E. Georger, the mother of said child, never saw it or the said Sophie Landgraf and never was advised as to the whereabouts of said child; that an investigation has been conducted since the latter part of October, 1926, for the purpose of locating said child but that no record has been discovered of the birth of said child; that the exact location of the hospital in which it was born has not been discovered, although said petitioner has ascertained that a Doctor Ralph Walsh, who was House Physician in and about the year 1896, at the Shoreham Hotel and the Metropolitan Hotel in Washington, D. C., occasionally treated emergency cases at the Physicians' School or Doctors' Hospital and also at the Providence Hospital in the City of Washington, D. C.; that the said Doctor Ralph Walsh is deceased and the petitioner has been unable to discover any of the records of the said Doctor Ralph Walsh; that the petitioner has made a diligent effort to locate the said Sophie Landgraf but has not been able to do so; that it has been informed that the said Florence E. Georger spoke of the birth of said child to several friends and acquaintances whose names and addresses are stated in said petition and that she also spoke of the birth of said child to the Attorney at Law who drew her Last Will and Testament, in which was inserted a clause that she made no provision in her will for any of her children by either her first or second marriages; that the petitioner has ascertained from a former partner of the said Francis Frederick Georger that the said Francis Frederick Georger and the said Florence E. Georger left New York for Washington about January 29, 1896, and did not return until March of said year; that the said Francis Frederick Georger died on January 11, 1928.

That the said child of the said Francis Frederick Georger, if alive, would now be of the age of approximately thirty-three years; that the said child has not been heard from or heard of since the month of February, 1896, and that petitioner has been unable to find anyone who has any knowledge of the whereabouts of said child or the disposition made of said child by the said Sophie Landgraf, or otherwise, or of the whereabouts of the said Sophie Landgraf, or whether she is living or dead; that petitioner is unable to name any person from whom any information can be secured concerning the whereabouts of said child; that one James E. Nicholson, who resides at 1310 North Eutaw Street, Baltimore, Md., may claim to be the said child; that the fact that said Nicholson may make such claim was brought to the petitioner's attention through his answering an advertisement inserted in the Baltimore Sun by petitioner; that petitioner has been unable to ascertain whether the said child of the said Florence E. Georger and Francis Frederick Georger ever married or whether he has any issue; that if the said child had died on the date of the filing of said petition his heirs at law and next of kin would have been his cousin, the said Vivian E. Cornelius, if he had died without leaving a wife or issue him surviving. If the said child had died within this State on the day fourteen years after the date of his disappearance, viz., on or about the 14th day of February, 1910, leaving no issue, the person who would be entitled to the one-half of the said trust estate which would have been payable to him had he survived until the date of distribution thereof, is the said Vivian E. Cornelius. If said child had died on said last mentioned day, leaving issue, the persons who would have been entitled thereto would be his issue had they survived until the date of distribution.

Annexed to said petition is a copy of the said Last Will and Testament of the said William E. Emery and a copy of an account of the administration of said trust from the 6th day of February, 1928, to the 31st day of May, 1929, together with a statement showing all changes in investment since the date of the last accounting and a schedule of the assets comprising the corpus and income of such trust.

The prayer of said petition is that the trust estate therein mentioned or the one-half thereof to which the issue of the said Florence is entitled, if such issue survived the said Florence, both principal and any accumulations of unpaid income, or otherwise, may be transferred to the said Vivian E. Cornelius as trustee, under and in accordance with said Act entitled "An Act relating to testamentary trusts," approved April 29, 1929, he being the person to whom, under the provisions of said trust, such one-half would be distributed if the said son of the said Florence had died intestate within this State on the day fourteen years after the date of his disappearance and had left no wife or issue him surviving.

The petition further prays that an order may be made prescribing the inquiry to be made by the petitioner for the purpose of ascertaining the name and post office address of the said son of the said Florence, whose name and post office address are unknown to the petitioner; that a time and place for the hearing of said petition may be fixed and that an order may be made directing that a notice of the filing of said petition and of said order be issued, served and published as provided by the provisions of an Act entitled "An Act relating to testamentary trusts," approved April 29, 1929.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that upon the filing of said petition an order was made by the Honorable Edwin Robert Walker, Chancellor of the State of New Jersey, prescribing the inquiry to be made by petitioner for the purpose of ascertaining the name and post office address of the said son of the said Florence, and that on the 12th day of November, 1929, the said Honorable Edwin Robert Walker, Chancellor of the State of New Jersey, made an order directing that this Notice be served upon such of the persons above named as reside in the State of New Jersey and whose names and addresses are known to petitioner, and that it be published in The Washington Post, a newspaper printed and published in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, and in the Newark Evening News, a newspaper printed and published in the City of Newark, State of New Jersey, in accordance with the provisions of said Statute, and that said order provides that the persons above named, and all persons who may claim an interest in such trust estate, and all whom it may concern, appear before the Chancellor at the Chancery Chambers in Newark, and State of New Jersey, on Tuesday, the 3d day of June, 1930, at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon of said day (Eastern Standard Time), and show cause why the one-half of the said trust estate to which the issue of the said Florence is entitled, if such issue survived the said Florence and is still alive, both principal and any accumulations of unpaid income, or otherwise, should not be transferred to the said Vivian E. Cornelius as trustee, as the person to whom, under the provisions of said trust, such one-half would be distributed if the said son of the said Florence had died intestate within this State on the day fourteen years after the date of his disappearance and had left no wife or issue him surviving, or to the person or persons to whom and in the shares and proportions in which it would, under the provisions of said trust as set forth in said will, be distributed if said son of the said Florence had died intestate within the State of New Jersey on the day fourteen years after the date of his disappearance as such date of disappearance shall be determined by the Chancellor, without leaving a wife or issue him surviving, as provided in the Act above mentioned.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that at the time and place above mentioned all of the persons above named and all persons who claim an interest in said estate and all whom it may concern may appear before the Chancellor and be heard.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that the said petition is now on file in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Chancery, in the State House, Trenton, New Jersey, and that a copy thereof may be seen at the office of Bankers Trust Company, 16 Wall Street, New York City, or at the office of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, Solicitors of the Bankers Trust Company, 763 Broad Street, Newark, New Jersey.

AMERICAN SECURITY ENDS FORTIETH YEAR

HAS EXPANDED STEADILY

The American Security & Trust Co. today completes its fortieth year of service to the Washington public. The institution opened its doors for business December 9, 1889, at a temporary location at 1419 G street northwest. Later it entered new quarters at 1405 G street northwest. In 1905 its new building located at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue was completed and since that time it has been the home of the main office of the company.

Its original issue of capital stock of $1,250,000 was increased to $3,000,000 in 1904, and $400,000 more was added in 1919, which gave this company a larger capital than any bank or trust company in the city.

Alexander T. Britton was the first president of the company, and was succeeded to that office in 1893 by the late Charles J. Bell, who remained the active head of the institution for 35 years. In 1928 Mr. Bell became chairman of the board of directors, and Corcoran Thom was elected president.

Merger Increases Deposits.

Through the consummation of a merger in 1919 with the Home Savings Bank, the deposits and resources of the American Security & Trust Co. were greatly increased. A comparative statement of the year 1919 with the one immediately preceding shows that deposits were increased from $12,099,399.40 to $24,940,401.42, and resources rose from $17,610,275.63 to $31,121,246.36.

During this span of years deposits and trust accounts have grown to such proportions that it is now the largest trust company in the city. The consistent growth of the institution is indicated by the following tabulation:

Year.	Resources.	Deposit.
1900	5,999,136.73	3,628,298.82
1910	12,988,124.39	7,190,583.74
1920	28,173,586.05	22,429,411.30
1929 (Oct. 4)	39,669,355.62	31,782,304.48

Officers of the company are Corcoran Thom, president; B. F. Saul and Howard Moran, vice presidents; Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary; Charles E. Howe, treasurer; David N. Houston trust officer; William L. Beale, real estate officer; J. Dann Faber, auditor; Albert H. Shillington and Robert L. Flather, assistant secretaries; William W. Keck, Edward E. Swan, Hans W. Jonscher, assistant trust officers; John E. Benton, assistant auditor.

Directors of the company are C. A. Aspinwall, Harry K. Boss, George W. Brown, William M. Coates, William S. Corby, W. W. Everett, Wm. J. Flather, jr., M. G. Gibbs, Cary T. Grayson, James M. ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM

About Several Stocks.

E. G. D.—What do you know about the following stocks? Chrysler, Hupp, U. S. Rubber, White Sewing Machine, General Motors, Fisk, Cities Service and Engineers Public Service.

Answer—Chrysler can pay its dividend a year ahead if it so desires, while the position of General Motors in turning out diversified products adds merit to the stock. Cities Service and Engineers Public Service are regarded as being in the investment class as earnings have been good over a period of years and dividends have been paid for a long time. The remainder of the stocks mentioned are regarded as speculations, or semi-speculative.

Several Matters Discussed.

J. C. R.—Is there a book published showing how to figure a stock should sell at, according to earnings, dividends, yields, etc.? I am a novice at the game but anxious to learn about Radio, Memphis Gas?

Answer—You can get the book entitled, "The Work of Wall Street" at any bookstore. It was written by Sereno Pratt; also, ask your broker for one of his pocket manuals, which are given to clients gratis. The Radio Corporation is now facing a Government monopoly suit and earnings have not been up to expectations. It may be well to wait until the outcome of the Government's suit. Memphis Natural Gas is a well-managed concern, which owns pipe lines with a daily capacity of 60,000,000 cubic feet, together with compressors, etc. Twenty per cent of the common is owned by the National Power & Light Co., and a substantial block of stock by the Union Utilities Co. Initial preferred dividends of $1.75 a share were inaugurated last January. Nothing is paid on the common.

International Combustion.

W. E. C.—I have some common shares of International Combustion Engineering Corporation. Can you give me the benefit of your knowledge of the record of the company for 1928 and 1929, its earnings, the par value, number of shares and why the dividend was discontinued. Also if earnings of the company will warrent the resumption of dividends in the near future. Will you also give me your opinion as to whether to hold the stock or to sell at present market value?

Answer—Can not advise as to what price, if any, at which you should sell your stock. Net income for year ended December 21, 1928, amounted to $3,237,195. No earnings figures for 1929 have thus far been given, but in early part of September it was stated that business during the current year has been 50 per cent above that of the like 1928 period.

In connection with the passing of the common stock dividend, an official statement was made in which it was said that in view of the large amount of work on the company's books and expansion of its business, the board decided to omit payment on the common to conserve cash. Since that time directors have failed to declare the preferred dividend due about this time. It is impossible to say when dividends are likely to be resumed. The outlook for the stock just now appears to be overpromising, to say the least.

U. S. Rubber and Others.

E. M.—I have a few shares of U. S. Rubber, Congoleum Nairn and Borg-Warner and I would like your opinion regarding these investments.

Answer—In view of the fact that Borg-Warner Corporation is the only one named on which dividends are now being paid, that company disbursing quarterly payments of $1 per share each, it is the only one that has any claim whatsoever to the title investment. Even at that this stock is not to be classified as an investment in the ordinary meaning of that term, but is a speculative investment. The others, while having some long-pull speculative attraction, are not considered suitable for the employment of investment funds.

General Alloys.

H. A. L.—Will you kindly favor me with information regarding General Alloys, listed on the New York Curb Exchange, as follows: What do they manufacture? To what industry is their product usually sold? Is their financial condition fairly satisfactory and have they paid dividends consistently? Is their management regarded as capable?

Answer — Company manufactures heat-resisting nickel and chromium alloy products and castings, such as retorts, kettles, cooling racks, furnace doors, &c. Products are distributed under trade names, "Q-alloys" and "X-ite." Recently company reported operating at capacity and having largest volume of unfilled orders in its history. A report lately submitted by company's auditors showed ratio of current assets to current liabilities of 8.1 to 1. Net income in 1928 was $210,595, equal to $7.41 per share of preferred and $1.91 per share of common stock, as compared with $113,640, equal to $3.79 and 93 cents per share of preferred and common stocks respectively in 1927. On present preferred ($10 par) quarterly dividends of 17½ cents per share have been paid regularly. On the common (no par) quarterly dividends, inaugurated October 1, 1927, have been continued to date. On account of earnings and dividend record management may be regarded as capable.

Columbian Carbon Common.

J. B. G.—I will appreciate your opinion on Columbian Carbon common stock. I understand the company's chief business is the production of carbon which is sold to rubber manufacturers. Is the company interested in the natural gas business? Is it a buy for the long pull? Do you prefer the stock to Standard Oil of New Jersey?

Answer—Columbian Carbon is the largest producer of carbon black in the United States. It also sells natural gas and produces gasoline. Earnings for the first half of 1929 were in excess of those for the entire year 1928. The stock is very well regarded as a speculative investment. But Standard Oil of New Jersey is a more conservative investment issue. Both issues appear attractive for long-term holding.

To the Holders of Common Stock Warrants of Safeway Stores, Incorporated:
All Common Stock Purchase Warrants of this Company expire on December 31, 1930. The First Series Warrants, as adjusted, give the holder the right to purchase Common Stock at $90 per share in 1929, and at $100 per share until December 31, 1930. Holders of the First Series Warrants who do not exercise their right to subscribe to the Common Stock at $90 per share during 1929 will have to pay $100 per share in order to exercise their rights next year. The Second Series Warrants give the holder the right to purchase Common Stock at $80 per share until December 31, 1930.
In 1929 Safeway entered the Canadian field by acquiring 70 grocery stores and 12 warehouses, including stocks of goods, and by the opening of 80 new stores, representing in all an expenditure of over $5,000,000. This is the first step in an expansion program in the Dominion of Canada that is expected to give Safeway a large chain of food stores in that country within the next three years.
The Safeway System during the past seven years has shown a large and consistent growth in stores, sales and profits. Through the opening of new stores and the acquisition of existing chains, Safeway has developed from a unit operating stores exclusively in California to the largest organization of its kind west of the Mississippi. Its operations now embrace twenty States in this country, the District of Columbia and extend into Canada and the Territory of Hawaii.
The following tabulation shows the Company's progress since 1923, taking into consideration the results of the new units only from the dates of their acquisition:

Year	Number of Stores Operated	Net Sales	Net Operating Profit	Net Profit After Taxes
1923	309	$19,947,321.80	$ 810,243.59	$ 746,875.86
1924	439	28,532,318.55	1,198,629.46	1,131,388.00
1925	580	38,691,930.97	1,476,619.69	1,308,404.40
1926	766	50,536,513.95	1,765,674.79	1,480,685.81
1927	915	69,573,685.31	2,388,830.43	1,906,674.99
1928	1,995	103,303,598.58	4,006,689.43	3,505,098.07
1929 (One Month Est.)	2,600	210,000,000.00	7,000,000.00	6,200,000.00

The growth of the Safeway System, as now constituted, including the operations of the several businesses acquired irrespective of the dates of acquisition, has been as follows:

1923	546	$33,261,821.76	$1,373,330.54	$1,261,963.46
1924	844	53,328,509.46	2,147,646.28	2,007,411.14
1925	1,050	70,250,939.44	2,538,878.84	2,255,311.53
1926	1,319	87,487,660.96	2,829,970.04	2,443,839.57
1927	1,567	111,799,941.74	3,405,411.51	2,811,372.28
1928	1,995	149,227,539.70	5,227,436.61	4,649,470.43
1929 (One Month Est.)	2,600	210,000,000.00	7,000,000.00	6,200,000.00

The outstanding capitalization of the Company as of December 5, 1929, consisted of $4,598,400 of 7% Dividend Series Preferred Stock and $3,915,000 of 6% Dividend Series Preferred Stock, both issues of $100 par, and 620,246 shares of Common Stock, without par value. There were also outstanding Warrants for the purchase of 68,027 shares of Common Stock.
Net earnings for 1929 are estimated at not less than $9.00 per share on the average amount of Common Stock outstanding, as compared with $8.12 per share in 1928. This estimate of earnings includes nothing from the investment during the year of more than $10,000,000 in new stores and other properties, which investment is expected to increase substantially earnings of the company in 1930.
With the above facts in view, the company recommends that the First Series Warrant Holders consider the advantage of exercising their right to purchase the Common Stock at $90 per share before the expiration of that privilege on December 31, 1929.

LOU LITTLE REPORTED SIGNED AS COLUMBIA COACH

ARMY ELEVEN GOES WEST IN STYLE

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The preparations for the trip of the Army Football Team to Palo Alto, Calif., for the return game with Leland Stanford University on December 28, have been completed with the characteristic efficiency of the Army. Officers of the Marine Corps have another term for the characteristic efficiency of the Army, preferring to call it the Army's usual sloppy manner, but then the Marine Corps officers are very exacting critics of other people's efficiency and especially of the Army's. According to the standards of efficiency of the average husband in travel, these arrangements for the 6,000-mile journey of the West Point football detachment are very thorough, leaving nothing to chance, with the notable exception of the games of red-dog and black-jack in the drawing rooms en route. It is always deemed to be good form in Army circles to let nature take her course in the red-dog and black-jack games.

The Army train will consist of thirteen cars, including seven sleepers, two diners, an improvised gymnasium, a dressing and locker room, a shower room and a room in which Mr. Frank Wandle, the old trainer, will set up the sun-ray, moon-ray, violet-ray and other more or less therapeutic lamps and machines with which he treats the minor wounds of the athletes.

Wandle Has Great Faith.

Mr. Wandle himself, has great faith in these electrical devices and inasmuch as the detachment will be on the road almost two weeks and inasmuch as Mr. Wandle, himself, had much to do with the arrangements, it is not surprising to find that most of one baggage car has been set aside for this elaborate establishment which resembles nothing so much as the corn-doctor's department of an ultra-motion barbershop on Broadway. As to whether those devices actually do relieve injuries the athletes on the team are not very specific. Mr. Hertz Murrell, the full back, once remarked that they didn't make him feel any worse and said that in view of the great pleasure which Mr. Wandle derives from operating his equipment, it was little enough for him to do it still and take it.

In view of certain paragraphs of the Carnegie foundations' report, dealing with the demoralizing effects of luxurious travel on impressionable young men, it has been proposed that Maj Gen. William L. Smith, the superintendent of the Military Academy, share one upper berth with Maj. Phil Fleming, the post athletic officer, sleeping either in tandem or in rotation, as an example of self-sacrifice and the Spartan way of life for the young cadets. But it is not likely that anything will come of this.

Close Order Sleeping Advocated.

The Carnegie Foundation expressed some perturbation because football players were allotted an entire berth, each, and a lower berth, at that, as a rule, while on tour. It was the feeling of the learned professors that the boys should double-up, preferably in uppers, so as to be conveniently reminded that upon graduation from college they might not be able to afford individual lowers. The argument on this subject then wandered off to something about the probable relation of unlaundered football pants to the rate of mortality from stain diseases. At any rate, Gen. Smith and Maj. Fleming probably were spoiled some years ago and I doubt that they could be unspoiled now by eight nights of close-order sleeping in an upper.

The railroad companies have put themselves to considerable expense and effort to perfect the Army's plans for the journey and the composition of the train. Mr. Wandle insisted that his athletes must have hot and cold showers and the Santa Fe Co., which furnished the electrotherapy or corn doctors' studio, retired one of its baggage cars to the shops for some time while engineers and mechanics cooperated to build two large tanks along the side walls, heated by coils. These tanks are connected with the cold-water tanks on the roof, allowing for smooth regulation of the temperatures in the baths. Mr. Wandle says this is the first time this kind of thing has been done on a moving train, but perhaps he is merely trying to pick an argument.

Baggage Car is Locker Room.

The baggage car next astern of this car will be the locker room, with benches secured along both side walls and a hook for each man's bag. There will be a gangplank in this car, capable of quick operation, which will be shoved out or hauled in in three

Apaches Beat Irvington, 6 to 0

District Champions in Victory Over Baltimore Eleven.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 8.—Joe Sweeney, fleet safety man, saved the day for the Apaches, champions of Washington, in their spectacular struggle against the strengthened Irvington Eleven today at Gibbons Field.

It was Sweeney's 55-yard run back of a low punt that decided the issue between what probably were the two strongest sandlot teams to face each other in a game here since the days of Joe Mallon's Baltimore professionals. When the visitors failed to convert the try for extra point the scored remained at 6 to 0 to the finish.

By taking the measure of Orville Neal's team, bolstered by the presence of two stellar new players, Herpes, center, and Johnson, tackle, the Apaches successfully defended their title of South Atlantic independent champions. They had dethroned the Mohawks of their own city to gain the title the Sunday before. Irvington is the present holder of the Baltimore sandlot title.

Scoreless Tie Seemed Imminent.

Sweeney made his spectacular run in the third quarter, at a time when it seemed that the contest was doomed to end scoreless. Neither running attack had seemed to make much impression on the opposing line, the lines playing with great spirit and dip-charging under everything directed inside tackle. Each team had strong tackles and ends, and outside plays as a rule did not get far.

However, Irvington, having maintained a slight edge up to the time of Sweeney's run, increased its effectiveness from scrimmage and twice threatened to tie the score. On one occasion, Spring hit the line twice for a first down and then Tanton caught a pass from McMains for an additional 18 yards to put the ball on the Apaches' 12-yard line. But Long passed over the goal line for a touchback and that threat died. Again in the fourth quarter the locals worked their way well into Apaches' territory only to falter in the face of the strong play of the visiting line.

Moore, Negro Hiker, Retains National Title

New York, Dec. 9 (A.P.).—Gus Moore, Negro star of the University of Pittsburgh, won the National A. A. U. senior cross-country championship over the Van Cortlandt Park course today. It was his second successive victory. Moore covered the muddy 6-mile course in 31 minutes 10 seconds.

Eino Heikkila, of the Dorchester Club, Dorchester, Mass., finished second, about 300 yards behind Moore. Another Dorchester runner, Eldridge Stevens, was third.

The team title went to the Dorchester Club with a low total of 33 points. The Meadowbrook Club, of Philadelphia, was second, with 46 points, and the Milrose A. A., New York, third, with 56. Other team scores were: Nativity Catholic Club, Philadelphia, 88 points, and the Brooklyn Harriers A. A., 102 points.

Moore's victory was not counted in the team scoring as he was an individual entry.

CAPTAINS SOCCER TEAM.

Haverford, Pa., Dec. 8.—Soccer elections at Haverford College resulted in the naming of Charles S. Penneypacker, of Ardmore, Pa., center half back, as captain for 1930. Frank N. Speller, jr., of Pittsburgh, was chosen manager, and A. Craig Succop, also of Pittsburgh, assistant manager.

Celtics Play Apache Eleven Next Sunday

By defeating the Mohawks yesterday the St. Mary's Celtic Eleven, of Alexandria, earned the right to meet the champion Apaches at Griffith Stadium next Sunday. It was rumored following yesterday's game that there might be some dispute over the eligibility of Celtic players for the Apache game. Manager Seymour Hall, of the Apaches could not be reached last night, but it is almost certain that he will keep his word and give the Celtics a game on the strength of yesterday's victory.

Manager Patsy Donovan, of the Mohawks, announced last night that he will relinquish any claims that the Mohawks have to Griffith Stadium for next Sunday in order that the Apaches and Celtics can play there.

SOCCER CARD MARKED BY UPSET

Fashion Shop Beats Wash. S. C., 6-2. 4 Other Games.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

LOCAL matches in the national cup tournament were loosely played and one-sided in every instance yesterday. Concord defeated Rockville on the Shady Oak Field, 9 to 2; Fashion Shop pulled a real surprise by stopping the Washington Soccer Club on the Monument Grounds, 6 to 2, and Locust Point Rangers swamped the youthful Silver Spring outfit, in Baltimore, 11 to 1.

In the Junior American League, Langley stopped Jefferson, 0 to 2, and Columbia defeated Hine by the narrow margin of 1 to 0 despite the fact that the latter team had but eight men. Macfarland forfeited to Stuart.

The Clark brothers, Earl, Abby and Tom, were too much of a combination for the Washington Soccer Club. Earl counted three times and Tom once, in addition to playing a strong defensive game throughout.

Fashion Shop Steps Out In Second Half.

At half time the score was deadlocked, 1 to 1, but the Fashion Shop kickers got going in the final half and scored practically at will. Caswell, the new forward of the Washington Soccer Club, played a stellar game for the vanquished eleven.

Concord had but little difficulty with Rockville. The Maryland boys displayed little knowledge of the game and appeared sadly in need of coaching. The Koenel brothers, Emil and Louie, and Kuhner were the outstanding Concord players.

Although badly defeated, John Gunn, manager of the Silver Spring outfit, was loud in praise for the treatment given his club in Baltimore. He stated that the referee was particularly good, and the spectators, numbering about 5,000, proved to be the best of sports.

After the games yesterday William Mann, manager of the Fashion Shop Team, announced the release of Irving and Wilson, who immediately signed with Rosedale.

A meeting of the Capital City League will be held tonight and the secretary of the local association has requested Gaithersburg to bring its Maryland registrations. The Washington Soccer League will meet tomorrow. Both meetings will be held in the playgrounds office.

Holm Plays on East Team in Coast Game

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Tony Holm, Alabama's All-American full back, will play with a team of Eastern football stars against a selected team of Western players in a New Year's Day football game on the Pacific Coast.

Holm late today wired his acceptance of an invitation by Andy Kerr, coach of the Eastern team, and will join the squad in Chicago December 16 for practice before the trip to San Francisco.

Celtics Defeat Mohawks, 3 to 0

Thomas' Drop Kick Is Decisive in Hard-Fought Game.

Hawk Bid for Touchdown Fails as Contest Ends.

ALEXANDRIA made sandlot football history yesterday. After years of trying to defeat a leading Washington eleven, representatives of the Virginia city finally reached their objective. The victory could hardly have been sweeter to Alexandria rooters, because it was the scalp of the famed Mohawks that the St. Mary's Celtics carried back across Highway Bridge. True, the margin of victory was only 3 to 0, but to the Alexandria fans, who composed half of the 3,000 at Griffith Stadium, it looked like a million.

The only score of the game came in the third period. The Celtics failed to make a first down in three tries on the Mohawks' 18-yard line. At this point, Bill Thomas dropped back to the 25-yard line, but few in the stands thought he would try a drop-kick. He was within 3 yards of the side of the gridiron and at such an angle on a muddy field there appeared little chance that a successful kick could be made. But this Thomas person is a very determined young man, as he proved in other instances throughout the game. The ball was passed; Thomas pointed it to the ground and his foot went into it with a thud. The ball sailed squarely over the cross-bar for the points that were to decide the game.

Hawk Drive Near End Fails By Inches.

But Thomas' drop-kick was no more dramatic than the fighting drive of the Mohawks, which fell inches short of snatching a victory with the timekeeper's watch seconds from the end of the game. The Celtics had just put the brakes on a Mohawk march that threatened to win the game when two players on the left side of the Mohawk line broke through to block Thomas' punt, which would have clinched the victory for Alexandria. The ball bounced free over on the right side of the field and "Bottle" Cox, veteran Mohawk star, pounced on it on the Celtic 15-yard line.

The Mohawks recognized this opportunity as their final chance and meant to make the most of it. Abbotticchio pounded the Celtic line as he has seldom pounded and the Alexandria forwards gave ground, but not enough for a first down. Colliere dropped back and many thought he might try a drop-kick, but he sent a long pass, which barely fell from a Mohawk player's fingers on the goal line. That was the last play of the game.

Celtics Mostly in Hawks' Territory.

The final score does not indicate the superiority that the Celtics showed over the Mohawks yesterday. Except for three instances, the game was played in Mohawk territory. Seldom has a single player dominated the offensive of a sandlot football team as Bill Thomas did yesterday. In addition to giving a masterful exhibition of place punting, he gained more than 150 yards for the afternon and otherwise handled himself as a topnotch star. He was ably assisted by Dick Allen, the Alexandria speed merchant who specializes in running back punts. Allen was in top form yesterday and his work helped the Celtic cause a lot.

On the defense, every Celtic player played a hard, wideawake game, but no mention of defense would be complete without words of praise for Rube Hayman. This Alexandria boy played inspired football. His head of black hair was to be seen wherever the ball and a Mohawk player appeared.

The Mohawks went down fighting despite the fact that they were up against a team which appeared much stronger yesterday, at least. With few exceptions, the Mohawks played their hearts out to win the game. This was particularly true of Abbotticchio, Colliere and Howard. Being on the defensive, for the most part, the Mohawks were forced to stand a lot of wear and tear, but they had enough left to come back with their last

Radio Ban and Early Closing of Season Subjects for Meeting of Major Leagues

Griffith Still Seeking Right Handed Batting Outfielder.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

PRESIDENT CLARK GRIFFITH, of the Nationals, accompanied by Secretary Edward B. Eynon, jr., and Manager Walter Johnson, leaves for New York this afternoon for the annual meetings of the major leagues. While the Nat owner is hopeful of landing a player or two, he is going to the "Big Town" with the same idea which takes representatives of the other big league clubs there—the hope of trading a scuttle of ashes for a ton of coal or a biscuit for a barrel of flour.

Griffith declares that none of the players on his pay roll, either regulars or rookies, is for sale or trade, but in the same breath he adds that he is always out to better himself, and there is no telling what players he would trade if he figured he could get more talent than he would have to give up.

"Every other club owner attends these meetings in the hope of picking up some material which might help his team, and I simply want to be on hand to see what they have to offer," the Nat owner explains. "While it is a fact that I have no players in mind to put on the market, if some one makes me a proposition which looks good, I certainly will give it serious consideration.

Nats Seek Right-Handed Hitting Fly-Hawk.

"I would like to pick up a right-handed hitting outfielder who has had some experience and shows hitting possibilities, and, naturally, would have to give up something to get him, but I'm not crossing any bridges until

PACKERS WIN PRO GRID CROWN

Greenbay Eleven Defeats Chicago to Clinch Title.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The Greenbay Packers won the national professional football championship today by defeating the Chicago Bears, 25 to 0, in their final game of the season. The victory gave the Packers a season record of 12 wins, 1 tie and no defeats.

The Packers won easily today through great playing by Verne Lewellen, Carl Lidberg, Eddie Kotal and Lavvie Dilweg.

The first touchdown came in the initial period, Lidberg going over on a center play from the 14-yard line. The second period was listless and no scores resulted. The Packer parade across the Bear goal line reached its height in the third period, when three touchdowns were scored in quick succession.

Kotal scored two of them after pretty catches of passes from Lewellen, while Lewellen went over from the 2-yard line for the other.

Only One Try for Point Successful.

Out of four attempts for extra point after touchdowns, only one was successful, Red Dunn booting the marker.

This has been the most successful year for the Packers, who have been coming close but never before gaining the title. The lone tie against them was turned by Frankfort.

Le Champlevois, 13 to 1, Wins French Chase

Paris, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Before one of the smallest crowds in the history of Auteuil racing, Le Champlevois, 3-year-old belonging to Gustave Beauvais, won the Maubourget Stakes, a steeplechase at two miles and a quarter, from a field of ten starters today.

Magnates Are Divided on Broadcasting of Ball Games.

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The retreat of the baseball clans from Chattanooga progressed as far as New York today as officials, magnates, managers and camp followers gained strategic positions in which to await the annual meetings of the major leagues here this week.

Driven from its traditional meteing site by the razing of the Waldorf-Astoria, the National League will assemble in the Hotel Commodore on Tuesday, and the American League will gather in the same place on Wednesday. The joint meeting of the two circuits will be held at the Biltmore on Thursday.

Aside from the solemn ceremony of voting the two pennants to the Athletics and the Cubs, the two major circuits have two or three pieces of important business on which to take action, including an earlier closing date and a stand on the question of broadcasting games.

Decision May Be Made By Landis.

Both the early closing and the radio will be taken up by each league individually, with final decision doubtless awaiting the joint meeting, over which Commissioner Landis will preside.

Although the 1929 world series had the good fortune to encounter three very fine afternoons in Philadelphia after a chilly opening and a frigid second game in Chicago, sentiment in the two circuits seems to lean toward a closing date on the last Sunday in September, the 28th next year. The world series then could be completed in the first week of October,

$18,000 Year Salary, Is Reported

New York Paper Says G. U. Grid Coach Has Accepted Post.

Little Refuses to Confirm Report of His Getting Job.

LOU LITTLE, Georgetown's director of athletics and head football coach, will be the new Columbia University football coach under a contract calling for an annual salary of $18,000, according to the New York Herald-Tribune, which says the source of this news is reliable. The length of the contract was not disclosed.

Questioned at his home last night, Little stated that he could say nothing about this report, but that he expected to know something definite today or tomorrow concerning his future, whether it be related to Georgetown or another institution. He also said that he had lately been offered a coaching position with a Far Western school, the name of which he could not reveal.

The identity of Columbia's new coach will be revealed today at a meeting of the University Athletic Association, an Associated Press dispatch said last night.

Appointment Not Surprise.

The Herald-Tribune story, in part, says:

"The appointing of Little does not come as a surprise, inasmuch as he has been the main figure in the discussion ever since Charley Crowley's resignation as coach of the Lions became known after the Syracuse game. Several days ago Little announced that he had turned down the offer to coach at his alma mater, Pennsylvania, where a new coach is being sought to take the place left vacant by Lou Young. The Blue and Gray coach was quoted as saying that he was gratified at receiving the offer from the Red and Blue authorities and that it had been his object to coach Pennsylvania whenever he obtained the opportunity.

"He went on to say that he was considering another offer. In all probability the amount of money offered deterred him from accepting the position at Pennsylvania.

"Little has been acting both as football coach and director of athletics at Georgetown, and from the same source of information it was learned that Mike Palm, former Penn State quarter back and Georgetown back field coach, will be the mentor at the Washington school. Palm played in the back field quartet on the Nittany Lions Eleven with Harry Wilson, Glenn Killinger and Hinkey Haines. He was back field coach at Georgetown for several years, and then in 1928 forsook the game for his business duties, but was induced to take up coaching again for the season just completed.

G. U. Seeks Graduate Manager.

"The Georgetown authorities are in search of a graduate manager of athletics, and as yet no names have been mentioned in connection with the position. It is unlikely, however, that the Georgetown athletic authorities will choose Palm to act in the same capacity as Little, as it has been claimed for the last few years that taking charge of the two jobs was too heavy a burden for one man."

Georgetown authorities could not be reached last night for a statement on the latest revelations on the subject. Thus far they have refused to discuss the athletic situation at Georgetown, particularly with reference to the position of Little; in spite of the constantly increasing number of rumors predicting that the Hilltop

Von Porat Slight Favorite Over Scott in Bout Tonight

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Ousted from Madison Square Garden by the pedal pushers of the six-day bicycle race game last week, representatives of the cauliflower industry return in force this week with two boxing carnivals.

The first—tomorrow night—finds Phil Scott, the fighting fireman from London, battling Otto Von Porat, heavy-punching Norwegian heavyweight, in a 12-round bout for sweet charity's sake and, incidentally, for the possible chance of meeting Jack Sharkey at Miami in February. On Friday night, Ruby Goldstein, apparently back in the form that made him a formidable contender for the lightweight championship a few years ago, will take on Jimmy McLarnin, who punches just about as hard as Goldstein ever did.

The Scott-Von Porat struggle looms as one of the most important of the winter season and officials of the Christmas fund show have added an additional lure for boxing fans by announcing that the referee will be William Harrison (Jack Dempsey) for fistic purposes.

Von Porat Has Superior Punching Power.

Because of his tremendous punching power, Von Porat has been established a slight favorite over Scott, but there is plenty of English money that says Scott will outbox and outspeed the big Norwegian and gallop away with the decision.

Maxie Rosenbloom, whose clownish tendencies in the ring have nothing to do with his capabilities as a boxer and fighter, meets Julius (Yale) Okun, another New York light-heavyweight, in the twelve-round semifinal. George Hoffman, of New York, erstwhile national amateur heavyweight champion, takes on Marty Gallagher, of Washington, in a ten-rounder. Two four-rounders complete the card.

Despite its two big spots, and several smaller ones, New York will have to share a portion of the spotlight with Chicago, Boston, Cleveland and Detroit.

Shires Makes Debut At Chicago.

In the White City Arena at Chicago tomorrow night, Arthur (the great) Shires, pugnacious Chicago White Sox first baseman, will make his fistic debut in a four-round bout with Dan Daley, of Cleveland. On Friday night at the Chicago Stadium, Bud Taylor, of Terre Haute, meets Earl Mastro, Chicago featherweight, in a return bout at ten rounds. In the ten-round semifinal, Hein Mueller, latest German heavyweight importation, takes on Elzcar Rioux, of Canada, in his second appearance in an American ring.

The Boston Garden's weekly show on Friday night will be featured by the appearance of Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, in a non-title fight with Gorilla Jones, Akron (Ohio) Negro. Buster Brown, of Baltimore, and Frankie Moore, of

FIVE COLLEGE COURT GAMES ON WEEK'S CARD

G. U. Passers Listed for 2 Games

Play St. John's Wednesday, Baltimore U. Saturday.

Maryland Expects Battle From W. and M. Friday.

WEEK'S SCHEDULE

WEDNESDAY.
Georgetown vs. St. John's, at American University.

FRIDAY.
Gallaudet vs. Benjamin Franklin, at Kendall Green.
Maryland vs. William and Mary, at College Park.

SATURDAY.
American vs. Maryland State Normal.
Georgetown vs. Baltimore U., at Hilltop.

COLLEGE basket ball, introduced for the current season by Georgetown Saturday night, offers local fans five games this week with four of the Capital teams participating. Georgetown, Gallaudet, Maryland and American are scheduled to see action, with the debuts of George Washington and Catholic listed for next week.

The program opens Wednesday night when Georgetown will engage St. John's, of Annapolis on the American University floor. Two games will be played on Friday night with Maryland meeting William and Mary in its first game at College Park and Gallaudet opposing Benjamin Franklin in the Blues' inaugural at Kendall Green.

American will get under way on Saturday night, playing host to Maryland State Normal at the A. U. gymnasium, while Georgetown the same night will meet its third foe of the season when Baltimore University journeys to the Hilltop.

C. U. and G. W. Squads Not Yet Ready.

Neither Catholic nor George Washington has developed a first-string team as yet, but before the end of the week both will have done so. Coach Fred Rice has cut the Cardinal squad to fifteen players and plans to pick a tentative regular combination by Thursday, while Coach James E. Pixlee, of George Washington, has hopes of lining up his varsity by Saturday if not earlier. Pixlee has been handling the Colonials temporarily while seeking to hire an assistant who would relieve him of the court mentorship.

Georgetown experienced a setback in its inaugural, but should come back Wednesday night with a winning performance. There is plenty of strength and class in the Hilltop outfit, and its supporters need not feel pessimistic over the defeat at the hands of Gettysburg. Capt. McCarthy & Co. proved their ability last year and in 1927. They simply had an off night against Gettysburg, which, apparently, enjoyed an exceptionally good one. The Pennsylvania five did not impress as a polished basket ball machine, but it triumphed, nevertheless.

Gallaudet looks forward to a winning debut against Benjamin Franklin in spite of the loss of three dependables of last year's quintet. The Blues still have Konrad Hokanson and Johnny Ringle, clever guards, and Delmar Cosgrove, the best shot in the District for the last two years. Ringle alternated last season with Henry Drapiewski, one of the missing trio, and flashed much promise for a successful 1929-30 campaign.

William-Mary Promises Trouble For Old Liners

Maryland probably will encounter a lot of trouble in its opener with William and Mary, since several of the College Park veterans haven't been able to join basket ball practice owing to late football activities. Coach Burton Shipley will, however, be able to send an experienced team on the floor, as his big list of candidates includes six or seven who served a year ago and who do not play football.

Three weeks of intensive drilling has prepared American for a strong start. Coach Walter Young has capable replacements for Forrest Burgess and Bruce Kessler, the only men lost from the 1928-29 team, and he expects big things of Capt. Lichliter, LaFavre and Schloss, the holdover veterans.

PAUL OFF FOR SYRACUSE.

State College, Pa., Dec. 8.—Ernie Paul, lacrosse coach at Penn State, left for his home in Syracuse this week, where he will begin his duties as coach of the Syracuse University hockey squad. He will return to State College in March.

HAWKS LOSE TO CELTIC ELEVEN

minute threat, which appeared at the time to be headed for the victory.

At the start of the game the Celtics appeared to be on the verge of a score several times, but could not muster the punch to put it over. The game was played in Mohawk territory exclusively until Abbotticchio entered the game in the second period. It was at this stage that the Mohawks for the first time looked like the team of a month ago. On three rushes Abby carried the ball 30 yards and when the Hawks were checked Colliere punted well into Celtic territory.

Colliere then intercepted a pass, giving the Hawks their first scoring opportunity. The Mohawk quarter back was downed on the Celtics' 15-yard line. Abbotticchio pounded off 8 of the necessary 10 yards to a first down, but on the next play, after Abby had carried the ball to the 2-yard line, both sides were ruled off side and the ball was brought back. Abby was thrown for a loss on the next play and Colliere's try for a drop-kick goal was made.

While the first Mohawk game of two weeks ago, in which the Celtics were beaten 7 to 6, was the closest that an Alexandria team had ever come to winning over a prominent Washington club, the Dreadnaughts, of Alexandria, played the Rex A. C. to a standstill some ten years ago and the game was decided in favor of Rex by virtue of a drop-kick from the toe of Harry Harris, former West Virginia star, now a Washington merchant.

District De Molays Win at Baltimore, 23-19

Scoring 10 points in the last eight minutes of play, the Robert Lee Bruce Chapter of the Order of De Molay Basket Ball Team defeated the Belvedere Chapter quintet, of Baltimore, 23 to 19, on the Marylanders court. The Belvedere Five led, 12 to 6, at half time, the Washington cagers failing to shoot a basket from the floor during that period. They came back strong, however, and waged a great uphill battle to victory.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

LOUISIANA MUD—With more gumbo in sight for this afternoon at Jefferson Park, there is no good reason to anticipate anything other than more scratches and decidedly ordinary racing. Saturday's card was riddled when a torrent descended on the Shrewsbury course, and it begins to look like the ditty Paul Whiteman's boys made famous, or was it infamous? should have been "Louisiana," not "Mississippi Mud."

Regardless of the heavy going that seems certain to prevail, however, I have what I confidently believe will be one of the surest things of the meeting. It is none other than WITCHMOUNT, a 5-year-old thing from the George Jenkin's menage. Now Witchmount is nothing more than $3,000 top and bottom performer, but he looks like a spread in this particular spot. In fact it looks to Uncle Bertram like all he had to do is to beat **

BUSINESS FIVE LOOMS AS THREAT IN SCHOOL SERIES

Chase, Center, Adds Power To Team

Woodworth Has a Heavy Schedule for Squad.

Rival Teams Also Prepping for Start of Series.

By WILLIAM F. DISMER, Jr.

WITH Coach Lynn Woodworth's Business High School basket ball team rapidly giving signs of developing into a consistent winner this year, the prospects of a five-team race in the annual inter-high series which opens just four weeks from tomorrow is becoming more and more apparent.

Ever considered the permanent doormat of the High School League, Business tossers surprised last year by forcing the championship Tech Team to the limit in both of its meetings with that team and gave their followers their most longed-for wish by trouncing Bert Coggins' Central tossers on both occasions when the two teams met.

And with practically the same combination on hand which performed these "miracles" last year, reenforced by a first-class center, playing his first year of basket ball at Business, visions of a titular five at the Stenog institution appear not at all amiss. The new tap-off man playing with the Business five is Spencer Chase, and an accurate eye, coupled with a six-foot-two reach, makes the newcomer loom as a most valuable man for the Business team to have this year.

Woodworth Adds More Games.

Already the Woodworth-coached team has won three games, beating down a crack Alumni five on two occasions. And desirous of having his charges in action as much as possible before the high school race starts, Woodworth has just scheduled three more games for his players, in addition to those already announced. Tomorrow, the Business team will play its fourth game of the season, meeting the Strayer Business College five which recently bowed to Central. Three more games are down on the books for Business before tackling Tech in the opening series game on January 7.

Although scheduled to meet Woodward on December 16, Woodworth has arranged to have his boys meet the Catholic University freshmen on that night, which should give the Stenoga plenty of practice within twelve hours. And two nights later the strong George Washington yearlings will also be met. Woodworth also has a trip in mind for his charges, planning to take them to Fredericksburg on February 7, and on to Staunton Military Academy on the 10th of the same month.

Western Cagers Not Idle.

However, coaches of the other schools are letting no moss grow under their feet, and are rapidly getting their teams into shape for the impending season. For the coming week Western's team is slated to play two more games, although the first combat with the St. Mary's Celtics on Tuesday may be called off on account of exams in progress. However, Coach Moore's cohorts are to face the Swavely Prep School on Friday, and are looking forward to hanging up their second victory of the season begun last Thursday with a win over the Hyattsville five. Bob Freeman, all-high center; Dos Hatfield and Everett Buscher, are providing the nucleus for the Red and White five.

Although only two veterans remain from last year's squad at Eastern, Coach "Chief" Guyon has already noted two youngsters in his big squad which give promise of developing into "midget wonders." In Fineran, 14-year-old, 86-pound flyweight, Guyon has one of the smallest forwards ever seen on a local floor, but if the lad performs in action as he has in the daily scrimmages, he should be a wonder. Coupled with Dan Kessler, another youngster of his own size, they make a pint-sized forward twosome. If little fellows have ever proven their worth, they should prove theirs.

Tech Gets Late Start on Court.

Inserted into practice sessions throughout the past week, this pair of tricks have almost convinced the "Chief" that it will take a lot of class to keep them out of his starting line-up and, if they keep up their brilliant work, should give local fans more than enough to talk about once the series opens.

Coach Artie Boyd seems fairly well fixed for his 1929 campaign at Tech, having four of his winning combination on hand who are showing up well in daily practices. But the Tech team does not see action until the 20th of this month and, until then, their true form can only be the subject of guesses.

Up at Central, Bert Coggins is planning to make amends for the disastrous showing of the Blue and White five last season, and has already started his season with two games. The Central Team looked none too good in the first part of its opener with the Strayer five last Tuesday, but flashed a winning spurt within the last 2 minutes of play which enabled it to walk off the floor with a 29-24 victory. DeVeau, center, and Delisio, guard, looked to be the pair around which Coggins must build a five capable of restoring the Central Team to its prestige previous to last season.

HEATED GRID RACE OVER IN SOUTH

Tulane Is Outstanding in Season of Brilliant Battles.

By EDDIE BRIETZ.

ATLANTA, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The most exciting gridiron campaign in the brief history of the Southern Conference is ended, and nothing remains for the football hungry but the charity game between picked teams from the northern and southern ends of the conference here New Year's Day.

While Tulane tucked the title safely away ten days ago, interest remained at a high pitch right on down to the finish with the intersectional tilt between Oregon and Florida and the annual duel between Georgia and Georgia Tech headlining the final day's program.

The South went three up on the Pacific Coast in the intersectional warfare when Florida won handily from Coach John J. McEwan's big Webfoot eleven, 20 to 6.

The balmy Florida temperatures so bothered the Westerners that most of them played the last half minus their jerseys. Toward the fag end of the afternoon a cooling breeze came in from the ocean and made it possible for the Webfoots to perk up long enough to push over a touchdown and stave off a shut-out.

20,000 See Georgia Triumph.

While all this was going on, 20,000 persons huddled in the rain at Athens to see Georgia's Bulldogs double the score on Georgia Tech and win by a 12-to-6 count.

North Carolina won its seventh conference game by routing Duke's Blue Devils, 48-7, in the feature game of the northern end of the conference. The fleet backs of the Tarheels ran wild to roll up 48 points, making their total for the season 346, which makes them high scorers for the South this season.

Hackman and McEver scampered hither and yon to give Tennessee a crushing 54-0 triumph over the game, but badly outclassed Gamecocks of the University of South Carolina. Between them the "Touchdown Twns" scored eight touchdowns, McEver registering five and Hackman three. McEver added 33 points to his season's total which gives him the national lead.

Maryland was the only other conference team scheduled, and the Old Liners took a 12-0 licking from their old rival, Western Maryland.

Louisiana Poly Wins First Game.

In the one Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association contest, Louisiana Poly won its first game of the season by defeating Southwestern Louisiana, 24-7.

Centenary nosed out Loyola, of New Orleans, 6-0, and William and Mary won from Hampden-Sydney, 20-6, in the remaining games.

"IRON MAN" ELEVEN AT LANDON

Prep School Fails to Make Substitution During Season.

A FOOTBALL team which used but eleven players throughout its entire season.

That is the plucky, "iron-man" combination which Landon Prep School can boast. The new institution, which opened its doors last September, can proudly point to just eleven players who performed without substitution throughout four hard games of their inaugural campaign.

Coached by Gordon Kessler, former University of Maryland back field ace, the Landon team made an imposing record in its first season on the gridiron and predicted great things for the future of the school and new coach, alike.

The fact that Landon was able to win but one of the quartet of contests takes little from the glory of the pioneers of the institution, for among the four were some opponents which forced capable teams throughout this section to the limit. Beaten in their first two games by Charlotte Hall Military Academy and St. John's cadets, the Landon combination won the first game in its history when it licked the local Woodward Prep eleven, 7—0.

And the stock of the "iror men" soared even higher in its closing game of the 1929 season, when it held an Episcopal High School eleven of Alexandria to a 13—0 score, a defeat to be sure, but even then a credit to the school. For earlier in the season the Episcopal team had lost to the championship Tech High eleven but 7—6, and to approach that score in any way gave the Landon team a right to boast.

Only 3 Regulars to Be Lost To 1930 Team.

The eleven players who saw the campaign through without being once relieved are Hopper and Sands, ends; Hill and Boucher, tackles; Talbert and Hopkins, guards; Hitchcock, center; Smith, quarter back; Quinn and Baker, half backs, and Stockton, full back. And visions of an even brighter season in 1930 are awaited, with all but three of the eleven returning next fall to take up the gridiron game once more.

Those slated to leave the prep school in June are the three graduating members of the eleven, Eddie Talbert, Otto Hitchcock and Ken Smith. According to reports, young Talbert will enter Duke, Hitchcock will enroll at Washington and Lee, and Smith will go to the Naval Academy. And if these three continue their already imposing records in collegiate ranks much should be heard from the trio which helped to start Landon on its way to fame.

COMPANY F WINS.

In a spirited battle in the Hyattsville Armory yesterday, the Company F cagers defeated the Tank Corps Five of Fort George Meade, 22 to 18. The winners took a 13-to-6 lead in the first half and then sent in reserves. The visitors pulled up to 13 to 12 before the regulars were sent back to pull the verdict out of danger. Costinett and Vincent led the Guardsmen, who had previously vanquished the Tankers at Fort Meade.

coach will be situated elsewhere next Sepetmber.

A number of men will be considered to fill Little's place at the Hilltop. Besides Palm, the names of John DaGrossa and Herb Kopf, also present assistants to Little, and Jim McNamara and Harry Connaughton, former Georgetown football stars, already have been mentioned.

Name is Linked Elsewhere.

The reports linking Little's name to Columbia, Pennsylvania and other schools all are significant of the high regard in which he is held throughout the football world. His name has been associated with those of coaches with longer careers and older reputations in the list of men under consideration for the several coaching positions now open.

Georgetown football teams under Little have brought the Hilltop much prominence. Beginning in 1925, his second season under the Blue and Gray, Little-coached elevens earned and received great praise from exhav bn nar iav.PS9s-893taoinshrdlu perts the country over. His teams always have been near the top in Eastern rankings and over a stretch of six seasons have lost only nine games, including two during the campaign recently finished.

Centennials Complete Undefeated Grid Year

The Centennial Athletic Club, which ended its football season yesterday, will begin preparations for the basket ball season with a meeting at the home of Bill Smith, 34 Rhode Island avenue northeast, tomorrow night, at 8 o'clock.

The Centennials won eight games and tied two on the gridiron this fall. It was the second consecutive season that the team has been unbeaten. Yesterday's game with the Palace Athletic Club on the No. 1 Potomac Park Field ended in a riot after a spirited battle, in which neither team was able to show a decided edge. The Centennials will not meet the Palacians again.

Davidson Grid Star Lost 40 Seconds

Davidson, N. C., Dec. 8.—Thad Brock, captain of the 1929 football team of Davidson College, lost only 40 seconds of play during the season which has just closed. Following his famous 102-yard sprint against Duke University Thanksgiving he was nauseated because of the energy which his dash had sapped, and during the half was unusually sick. He was kept out of the game until it was necessary for Davidson to kick, and was sent back into the fray for this purpose. This was the first time during his playing at Davidson that Brock was kept out of any football contest because of injury or illness. In the 1929 season he was withdrawn 5 minutes during the close of the Elon game, when Monk Younger sent in an entire new team against the Christians.

IOWA FREE LANCE IN SPORTS

Must Look Outside of Big Ten for New Schedule.

By WILLIAM A. WEEKES.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The University of Iowa is a free lance as far as athletic competition is concerned, and the Western Conference again is the Big Nine.

After hours of debate Friday night and Saturday, the faculty committee on athletics of the conference denied Iowa's petition for reinstatement to unquestioned athletic standing in the group, and until some change occurs, no Western Conference team will engage an Iowa team.

From 1912 to 1917, the conference operated as the Big Nine, following Michigan's withdrawal over questions of rules. Michigan withdrew in 1908, and the league functioned with eight members until Ohio State University was admitted in 1912.

The faculty committee rejected Iowa's plea because the members believed the institution had not accomplished everything possible to clear up charges placed against it when it was barred last May, effective January 1, 1930. Charges of proselyting and subsidizing athletes apparently were cleared up by the reorganization of the Iowa athletic department. The committee, however, was not convinced that every athlete who was said to have benefited by an athletic fund, and student notes, had been dismissed—a step which they considered essential.

The Iowa delegates, Dean C. C. Williams, who made the plea for his school, and Athletic Director E. H. Lauer, were greatly disappointed at the failure of the committee to consider the petition favorably. Lauer was somewhat bitter, and turned to Scripture to explain Iowa's stand.

ON THE SIDELINES

by BRIAN BELL

WHERE do football players get their nicknames?

There were two Blizzards in the South, where the chambers of commerce say only gentle breezes blow.

Tulane has Willis Banker, the Blond Blizzard, while Tennessee swears by Eugene McEver, the Bristol Blizzard. If there is a Blizzard in New Orleans anywhere but on the football field indignant citizens will demand that something be done about it, and while an honest-to-goodness blizzard would have a better chance in Tennessee, any suggestion that such weather development may be expected during the life of the football sason would be met by a loud negative chorus from the Volunteer State's best minds.

New York University has a half back, O'Herin, who is called Jinx, but does not seem to be any more liable to injury than his fellows. The West calls Nagurski "Old Nag," obviously enough, but the big Gopher does not run like a broken-down horse.

There was once a football team with two players in the line-up boasting awe-inspiring nicknames. One was "Bloody Bill" and the other "Bullet," either enough to strike terror to the opposition.

Al Marsters is called "Special Delivery," a bit of gentle sarcasm, perhaps. Not all special delivery messengers set out to break speed records.

Every football team has its "Red," but some of the players are not "red"—Cagle, of Army, for instance, whose hair runs rather to a brick dust shade.

West Virginia has its Glenns, all called "Sleepy," and one of the best Smiths in the South answers to the name of "Catfish."

LESTER BELL, former third baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Braves, seems to have Rogers Hornsby running interference for him. The Rajah had Bell at third for the Cards when St. Louis won a world's championship. Later, when Hornsby was manager of the Braves, Bell was third baseman for Boston, and now, although Rogers is not manager of the Cubs, Bell has been acquired to play third for the National League champions.

Possibly Bell believes he can play better ball on an infield including Hornsby and if this is the case, he will make a good man for Joe McCarthy. The big fellow was a star in the 1926 season and played great ball in the world series. He has not been so good since, but as he is only 29 years of age he should not be anywhere near the end of his baseball course.

Bell's departure will leave the third base assignment on the Braves resting between the former guardians of the position for the New York Yankees, Joe Dugan and Gene Robertson. Both Dugan and Robertson moved to Boston from New York via the waiver route, Joe before the 1929 season opened and Gene about the time it was drawing to a close.

Robertson, in 90 games for the Yankees, batted .299, one point above Bell's average for 139 games in the National League. Dugan played in only 60 games for Boston, but batted .304.

A MUCH misunderstood branch of the golfing family will get a place in the picture in the New York district next summer, when a southpaw tournament will be added to the Westchester County program.

The lefthanders have had competitions among themselves, but they have been few and far between. A southpaw has a hard golf row to hoe. If he has a chance to play when he is away from his home course and has left his clubs behind, it is no simple matter to borrow the weapons, and some sensitive persons will not play with a lefthander if a way out can be found.

A pro paired once with a southpaw in a tournament asked to have another assignment made. "It makes me nervous to see a man play golf lefthanded," he said.

And yet other professionals will say that there is no reason why a lefthander should not play good golf. A disadvantage to be considered by a player inclined to play lefthanded is that the golf courses are built for the righthanders, who are in the great majority.

TYRUS RAYMOND COBB, who has heard the voice of baseball calling after a year in Europe and will become associated with some major league club in 1930, had a great vacation. Cobb spent the year touring with his family and returned to the United States, a bit heavier than when he went away, but apparently fit for a few good swings with a bat if the occasion seemed to demand it.

However, his baseball playing is all behind him, he said, although he proposes to "get in shape next spring, just for the fun of it." It won't be bad going through the training paces, he thinks, if he doesn't have to do it.

THE Georgia Peach was asked if he enjoyed the visit to the Old Word.

"Immensely," he replied. "All but an unfortunate experience with French chauffeurs. I had to ask waivers on two of them. Their ideas of speed and mine were far apart.

"I told the first one that when I said 'Slow up!' I meant just that. The climax came when we were driving along a road with two ox-carts in front of us. One was meeting us and the other just ahead, going in the direction in which we were traveling. There was no chance to get through between them. I saw that, so did Mrs. Cobb, and the chauffeur should have been able to see the same. I guess he did, but just didn't care.

"We got through, but it didn't do our nerves a bit of good, and after that experience I told this bird he was through. He didn't seem to understand that we were not in a hurry."

COBB, who holds more records than any other man, was anxious to see Hobbs, the great English cricket player, perform, but was not able to make his dates coincide with those of the great Englishbatsman.

"I was sorry," said Ty. "I had looked forward to seeing Hobbs in action. No, I did not play any cricket. I should have liked to try my luck at the wicket. When I saw the flat bats I was enthusiastic, but when I found how the bowlers could make the ball do tricks, I was not so sure I would have been successful. Our bats are round and there is, of course, much less hitting surface, but too, our pitchers keep the ball up and do not toss it up there, jumping all around the ground. I have an idea that a fast bowler would be hard to hit, especially on a wet day."

Cobb suggested that the English, with a little education in the charm of baseball, would take to the game. "Perhaps it would have to be modified somewhat, but I am sure they would like it after they found what it was all about. Every one treated me royally, and my British friends could not have been kinder."

SPEAKING OF TENNIS

—By—

ROBERT CONSIDINE

AS LEACH, who ranks with Lou Doyle and the other great old men of local tennis, calls me to task for "guying" the national tennis body, I agree with Mr. Leach's sentiment on certain aspects of that body. Their unremunerative loyalty, for one thing, and the giving of their undoubtedly valuable services, but I believe that the sporting public itself is heartily in accord when the objection is raised that, in a sense, the brunt of this splendid body's work is misdirected. The delay of this body in authorizing and lending enthusiastic support to professionalism and open tournaments is not good tennis management.

The tennis world abounds in a wave of democracy and castelessness unequaled in any other sport. A tennis racquet is a password into any community in this country, or any other. The national body seems to overlook the fact that tennis nowadays is played by everybody, myself, and the rest of the bricklayers. It has not been for years the favored exercise of men and women fortunate enough in worldly goods to engage in an exclusive sport.

Game Now Staggering Under Weight of Codes.

It was in those days that what snootiness there is left in the game appeared, and thrived, and that the terrible theoretical possibility of making money out of the game arose. At this late date the new and modern game of tennis sometimes staggers under the weight of codes that became ridiculous the moment the game stepped out of the country clubs into the public parks.

It was amazing to see players of the modern generation almost gasp when Richards and Lenglen and the rest announced, a few years ago, that thereafter they intended to eke a living from a sport which they had helped make live. Players were innately alarmed; some meaningless conviction, handed down to them from a tennissing ancestor, rubbed the wrong way, and many condemned the action of the hardy pioneers in professionalism for no better reason than that they, unconsciously, could not associate money and tennis.

It takes no super mind to grasp the fact that the absence of professionalism in such a universal occupation would be unnatural and harmful. Where a million people want to improve their games, the presence of professionalism is a necessity to the welfare of the sport.

Fan Doesn't Care How Player Earns Living.

The game is the thing, after all. Why doesn't the U. S. L. T. A. try to understand that the fan roasting on an uncomfortable bench in section D-30, who, not incidently, paid well for his perch, does not give a hang whether the expert on the court below makes his living selling bonds or breadfruit. People will pay to see good tennis, whether amateur or pro, and the fine legal terminology which the national body wades through in its edicts shoving a man this side or that side of the professionalism equator, is, to the great average tennis fan, so much vacuum. We want tennis, not segregation. Right now we want professional tennis because that is the best tennis obtainable. Any person who could prefer the banal Tilden-Hunter workouts to the crackling vi—— of Kozeluh versus Richards doesn't know what t-e-n-n-i-s spells.

Kozeluh vs. Lacoste, Richards vs. Cochet, Kinsey vs. Tilden, Najuch vs. Lott. No fan, it seems to me, could want an afternoon more resplendent in unearthly tennis playing. And yet this afternoon seems to be as far away as it was the day Richards & Co. issued their ultimati. Let the amateurs have their national championships and the professions theirs, but for the sake of God, the king and the game interlock the two for the preservation of the sport and the universal benefit of the fans.

Miss Mayfield, demon statistician of the Joint Recreational and Welfare Service, reports that no less than two hundred and seventeen thousand and four (217,004) people stepped up to the little booths last summer and signified their intention of playing tennis on the public courts. Figures for 1928 run around 180,000. Miss Mayfield's estimates for the last summer, by the way, only cover play up until October 31.

Playing indoors on a wooden court is an experience which no player should be deprived of. It is like another game, the difference is so marked. First, there is the matter of light. There is never quite enough of it, and the position of the ball is usually something of a mystery, squint all you want. Then the balls quickly assume the same drab color as the floor. But the bound of the ball is a source of never failing dismay.

Playing for the first time on a wooden court the consistency with which you drive balls over the net of the adjoining courts is little short of remarkable. The ball seems to double its thrust the moment it strikes the floor.

Winning Service Is Cinch on Indoor Court.

Winning your serve is a cinch indoors even for the players whose second ball takes the general course of a rainbow. Unless you are an old performer at the indoor game, an opponent's serve is an insurmountable obstacle.

One thing the indoor game does for a player is that it forces him to volley, whether he wants to or not. Indoor, the back court driver hasn't a chance against the volleyer. At the net is one of the few places where you can use your regular strokes, and the net area is the scene of most of the decisiveness.

Withal there is an attraction about the indoor game which piques the interest of the players who have tried it. Once on to the hang of it, the indoor game, at times, surpasses in thrills the outdoor game. At least half of the players who represented Washington last winter in the Baltimore Indoor League professed a preference for playing indoors.

The more hardy of the local fans who want their tennis, cold wave or no, are making the trip to Baltimore to play on the boards of the Fifth Regiment Armory. The seven courts housed under the big roof are available on Thursdays and Saturdays throughout the winter.

Colored Lights Make Game Real Problem.

Sometimes, in Baltimore, they decorate the Armory for impending dog shows and other epics. Each searchlight playing on the court is swathed on delicate green or red cheese cloth. Then, indoor playing becomes a real problem. One serves a yellow ball, it whizzes through blankets of pink, purple and burnt orange laden air, before your opponent strokes it, only then it is neapolitan blue.

GASOLINE ALLEY — Play Safe

WALT, NOW THAT YOU HAVE ALL THIS MONEY COMING TO YOU WHAT ARE YOUR PLANS WITH REGARD TO YOUR WORK HERE? IF YOU INTEND TO RETIRE OF COURSE I'LL HAVE TO BE LOOKING AROUND FOR SOMEONE ELSE FOR SALES MANAGER.
PLEASE DON'T COUNT ME OUT OF IT, MR. WICKER. I HAVEN'T GOT IT YET AND IT MAY BE SOME TIME BEFORE I WILL. I'D GIVE YOU PLENTY OF NOTICE.
I SUPPOSE YOU WILL WANT TO TAKE IT EASY, TRAVEL, IMPROVE YOUR GOLF GAME, SAIL YOUR YACHT AND ALL THAT. IT'S PERFECTLY NATURAL.
I'M NOT ENTIRELY SURE. MY WIFE WANTS ME TO BUT I HAVE A HUNCH I'D GET TIRED OF IT AND WANT TO GO TO WORK.
I THINK YOU ARE RIGHT, WALT. DON'T TOSS EVERYTHING OVER TOO SUDDENLY. YOU MAY FIND YOURSELF A MULTI-MILLIONAIRE LOOKING FOR A JOB.
I'M NOT GOING TO BURN MY BRIDGES TOO CLOSELY BEHIND ME AND I'M CERTAINLY NOT GOING TO BURN THEM IN FRONT OF ME BY LETTING GO OF THIS JOB UNTIL I HAVE THE CASH IN MY HANDS.

NEWS FROM MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

MORE POLICE URGED TO BALK BURGLARS

Arlington County Force Too Small to Cope With Calls, Says Sheriff.

BOND JUMPER IS CAUGHT

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Because of the increasing number of calls for police to apprehend burglars in Arlington County, Sheriff Howard B. Fields declared last night that his force of nine men is inadequate to cope with the situation.

"With housewives going to Washington and other sections to do their Christmas shopping, they should, when leaving their homes, see that all windows are locked," said Fields.

The sheriff stated Arlington County contains 29 square miles, 22 schools and 2 highways that carry more traffic than any other two highways in the State, and asserted it is unreasonable to think that nine police, who are called upon for duty from 18 to 24 hours a day, can give the citizens of the county all the police protection they are entitled to.

As the December term of the Circuit Court opens today, Sheriff Fields said that he proposed to discuss the situation with Judge Smith in an effort to see if something can not be done to increase the force.

"I realize the county board of supervisors is short of funds, but Arlington County is no longer a country town, but a section which is thickly settled that should have police protection day and night," Fields said.

Charles Smith, colored, who in October, 1928, jumped his bond of $1,000 on a charge of violation of the prohibition laws, was apprehended in New York and returned to the Arlington County Jail Saturday night.

Efforts are being made, it was learned last night by the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, to obtain a report from the engineering extension division of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute on the industrial survey recently made by institute engineers.

This report is needed, declared Henry C. Morris, who with Ashton C. Jones and William S. Hoge constitute the special committee to prepare answers to the questions propounded by Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, executive officer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, on the needs of Arlington County for waterfront industrial development.

Gov. Byrd has been to the county twice during the last few months and has shown much personal interest in the development of Arlington County. It is understood that much of the data in the report will be forwarded to him at his office in Richmond.

The December term of the Circuit Court of Arlington County will convene today at 10 o'clock with Judge Howard W. Smith on the bench.

Because the October term has extended to the opening of the December term, the special grand jury will be called today with the opening of the court.

Indications are that the term will be a short one, as Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth has not more than ten cases to be presented to the grand jury.

Week-day religious education being sponsored by the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Council of Religious Education opens tomorrow morning with the first classes at the McLean schoolhouse, and in the afternoon at the Oakton schoolhouse. Wednesday morning classes for pupils of the Cherrydale School will be held in the Cherrydale Methodist Protestant Church. In the afternoon classes will be held in Community Methodist Church at Aurora Heights for the pupils from the James Monroe School. Thursday morning classes for pupils from the Clarendon School will be held in the Ballston Christian Church, and in the afternoon at the same place for pupils from the Ballston School. On Friday morning classes will be held for pupils of the Falls Church schools in the schoolhouse. In the afternoon the classes will be held in the Annandale School.

All classes will be conducted by Miss Isabel Latimer, who is a graduate of Boston University. She has also taught the week-day schools of Dayton, Ohio, and organized and directed the work of the week-day schools of religious education for the federal churches of Youngstown, Ohio.

Miss Latimer last night announced that beginning next week the classes will start on Monday with classes at the Arlington Methodist Episcopal Church in the morning for pupils from Patrick Henry School. In the afternoon classes will be held in the Fort Meyer Heights Methodist Protestant Church for pupils from the Woodrow Wilson School.

In Arlington County the morning hours will be from 9 to 10 and from 11 to 12 o'clock. The afternoon hours will be given out later. In Fairfax County the hours have yet to be determined.

The Arlington and Fairfax Counties School Board is cooperating in the work, and according to County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp those pupils who obtain the consent of their parents will be excused to attend the classes, which will be open to pupils from the fifth and sixth grades in the elementary schools.

Arlington Lodge, No. 193, I. O. O. F., will meet tomorrow night in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon. The election of officers will be the principal business. Those who have been nominated are: For noble grand, Norbert Miinick; vice grand, C. J. Ives; recording secretary, Frank Davis; financial secretary, C. P. Heins, and treasurer, W. B. Huffman.

The Clarendon Citizens Association will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow night in the rooms of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce in the Rees Building at Clarendon at 8 o'clock.

President C. R. Taylor asks that all members and others interested in the development of the community attend the meeting. Among the subjects will be needs of the county schools and the zoning of the county and its advantages.

The Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club will hold a luncheon meeting tomorrow at 12 o'clock in the Boulevard Bakery at Clarendon.

The Friendship Circle Class of the Ballston Christian Church will give a bazaar and dinner tomorrow night in the basement of the church building. Dinner will be from 5 to 8 o'clock. The proceeds will go to the church building fund.

The Woman's Club of Ashton Heights will hold its monthly business meeting tomorrow night in the clubhouse at 8 o'clock.

Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, the Parent-Teacher Association of the Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston will hold its monthly meeting in the schoolhouse. All parents are asked to attend the meeting, bringing their children, as the committee has arranged a special Christmas program.

In an effort to stiulate more interest in the Christmas tuberculosis seals, the Business and Professional Woen's Club of the county has inaugurated a package-wrapping contest for boys and gris, offering prizes totaling $5. Another object of the contest is to ipress upon the public that packages can and should be put up simply and attractively with just the tuberculosis Christmas seals as decorations, and that in doing so they are helping a worthy cause.

The contestant must be a school child residing in Arlington County, up to and including the age of 14 years. All packages must be turned over to the principal of the nearest school on or before Friday, December 20. They will be put on display December 21 in the windows of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce. The name and address of the contestant must be placed on the inside of the package before it is wrapped. There must be no indication of contestant's name or address on the outside, but the word boy or girl must be printed there.

The judging will be from the standpoint of the most decorative and practical use of the Christmas seals. No other stickers will be allowed. Plain or fancy string may be used, but no ribbon.

The Leeway Citizens Association will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Robert E. Lee Schoolhouse at 8 o'clock.

The Blessed Virgin Sodality of St. James Catholic Church of West Falls Church will hold its monthly meeting Wednesday night at the rectory at 8 o'clock.

The Active Firemen's Association of the Potomac Fire Department will hold its monthly meeting tonight at 7 o'clock in the Firemen's Hall.

Sidi Wirt Spreckels On Her Fourth Honeymoon

SIDI WIRT SPRECKELS, divorced wife of Prince Suad Chakir of Turkey, began her fourth marital venture Saturday in Fairfax County Courthouse when she married Lieut. Roger A. Gardner, aviator, attached to Langley Field.

Secrecy Veils Honeymoon Route of Couple After Fairfax Wedding.

The whereabouts of Sidi Wirt Spreckels, former wife of Prince Suad Chakir of Turkey, and her newly acquired husband, Lieut. Roger A. Gardner, are still unknown. Following their marriage Saturday in the Fairfax County courthouse, the former princess and her fourth husband, with her 8-year-old daughter, left on a honeymoon. Langley Field officials, where Gardner is stationed, declared he is on "leave."

Gardner, a West Point graduate of 1925, and now a lieutenant in the Army Air Service, and the much-married Kansas farm girl, were united in the Virginia courthouse by Court Clerk Elton R. Holbrooke. Gardner gave his age as 27 and his bride's as 35.

News of the engagement of the couple was followed by his transfer from Crissy Field, San Francisco, to the Virginia station. It was said that the transfer was caused by the objections of his family to the match.

Mrs. Gardner's first marriage, to Harry Williams, terminated in a divorce. Next she married John D. Spreckels, San Francisco millionaire, who was later killed in an auto accident. Then she married the Turkish prince, which union was severed by a divorce decree obtained by him in the Turkish courts, on the grounds that she refused to return to him after a visit to America. She later regained her American citizenship, which she had relinquished by her marriage to the prince.

MINER TELLS STORY OF HOURS IN CAVE-IN

SANG TO KEEP COURAGE

Morgantown, W. Va., Dec. 8 (A.P.). Three miners, entombed for 34 hours in a small space behind a huge fall of coal and slate in a Continental Co. mine at Cassville, and who were rescued early today by men who tunneled through 175 feet of coal, were in a hospital tonight, but it was said they were little the worse for their experience.

The rescue was completed by Charles Davis, assistant superintendent, who penetrated the last few feet of the 2½-foot square tunnel by scraping earth and coal away with his hands. He then dragged the miners out feet first and passed them out to freedom.

The assistant superintendent had hardly pulled the last man out and crawled to safety himself when the part of the tunnel cleared by him, and the erstwhile "tomb" caved in.

Sam Katchen, James Martindale and Luniar Holt, the two latter Negroes, were the men entombed. Martindale, choir leader in the camp's Negro church, described the space in which the men were trapped as "about the size of a rough box."

Martindale, who took charge of the little crew immediately after the fall on Friday afternoon, said the first step taken was the construction of stone wall supports to guard against a fall in the cramped quarters. It was very cold, he said, for the men were clad only in shirt and overalls.

"All we could do was pray," the choir leader-miner told persons at the hospital today. He also said he recalled several hymns and old Southern songs, singing to bolster the courage of himself and his companions.

Asked if he were going back to the mines, his wife, who was at the bedside, answered for him. "No," she said, "we're going back to Alabama."

Firemen Find Liquor Cache in Garage Fire

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 8.—As fire was raging in a two-story brick garage on Highland street late last night, destroying two automobiles, firemen carrying hoselines upstairs stumbled over three 10-gallon kegs, which, it is claimed, were filled with liquor. As the kegs were carried away by the police for disposition by the Federal prohibition officers, no one in the large crowd stepped forward to claim ownership.

On the building is painted the name of R. L. Zimmerla, auto vehicle painter. Zimmerla, it is said, was out of the city. A sign over the gate at the entrance reads, "Economy Auto Shop."

Man Arrested in Car; Alleged Rum Seized

En route to Washington in a car reported laden with 96 quarts of liquor, Nelson LeGore, colored, 30 years old, of an unreported Washingto naddress, was arrested on the Southern Maryland road about 1½ miles north of Mattawoman Swamp, Md., at 10 o'clock last night by Deputy Sheriff Harry Robinson, of Prince Georges County, and County Policeman V. M. Nichols.

LeGore was taken before Justice of the Peace H. W. Gore, in Upper Marlboro, and was ordered held under $1,000 bond in jail, there to await police court in that town Friday.

Three Washington Men and Woman Pay for Drinks at Bull Run Dance.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Vienna, Va.
Phone Vienna 64.

Sheriff E. P. Kirby, accompanied by several of his deputies, paid a visit to the Bull Run Dance Hall Saturday night as part of the campaign against rowdyism and intoxication at dance halls in Fairfax County. On arriving, the officers did not immediately alight from their car. They had been there only a few seconds when a group of people passed the car and proceeded to a car parked near by, where a bottle was produced and they all had a drink. The sheriff arrested four of the party who gave their names as Harvey Shelton, 29, of F street northeast, near Third, Beufus Gray, 19, William T. Gray, 37, and Mrs. William A. Fletcher, 29, all of Good Hope road southeast, Washington.

The charge of drinking in public was placed against all of them and an additional charge of transportation and possession of intoxicating liquor was preferred against Shelton. A pint and a half of alleged liquor an dthe car were seized. They were al lbrought to the Fairfax jail and Mrs. Fletcher released on collateral for her appearance for trial yesterday morning.

At a hearing before Justice of Peace R. D. Wharton, at Centerville, yesterday morning, they were all fined $5 and costs on the charge of drinking in public, and Shelton was ordered held for action of the grand jury on the charge of transportation and possession. Bond was set at $500.

Deputy Sheriff Henry Magarity was called to Springfield late Saturday evening where he arrested Robert Lee Taylor on the complain of Frank Javins. Taylor was charged with being drunk and disorderly. At a trial before Justice of Peace Harry Shephard, at Accotink, yesterday, Javins stated that he had warned Taylor to stay away from his house. Taylor was fined $17.

Funeral services for Mrs. James A. Bethune, 78, who died at the home of her daughter at White Hall, Wisconsin, last Friday, will be held this afternoon at 1 o'clock in the chapel at Fort yer. The Rev. Kopenhaven, of the Epworth Methodist Church in Washington will conduct the services. Mrs. Bethune will be laid to rest at the side of her husband in the Confederate section of the Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. Bethune is the mother of Capt. John F. Bethune, the present mayor of Falls Church, and had been a resident of Falls Church for several years, but had been living with her daughter in Wisconsin for the past three years. Most of her life was spent in Warrenton, Va., and Washington. She is survived by Capt. Bethune and two daughters, Mrs Charles B. Melby, of White Hall, Wis., and Mrs Theodore Smith, of Washington.

There will be a meeting of the McLean Baptist Woman's Mission Union tomorrow afternoon. A luncheon will be served at the home of Mrs. W. R. ELEVEN ARE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Youth Is Severely Cut When Machine Crashes Into Tree at Laurel.

COLLISION HURTS SEVEN

J. Richard Lewis, 20 years old, of Newton, Pa., was severely injured about the face and head early yesterday morning when the automobile in which he was riding collided with a tree on the Baltimore pike, near Laurel, Md. Four other traffic mishaps were reported to the police, but in none was any one seriously hurt.

Lewis was brought to Casualty Hospital by a passing motorist and treated for lacerations to the eye, forehead, scalp and nose. His condition is undetermined. His brother, P. W. Lewis, driver of the machine, was uninjured.

Seven Men Hurt.

Seven men were injured in another automobile accident near the same place when a car operated by Tony Hinnant, of Wilson, N. C., collided with the machine of Clifton Graham, of Laurel. Both automobiles were practically demolished and Hinnant was arrested by State Policeman J. E. Wheeler on charges of reckless driving and driving while under the influence of liquor. In default of $1,000 bond he is being held at the Ellicott City Jail, pending a hearing tomorrow before Justice of the Peace Howard U. Gosnell, of Savage.

The occupants of the two cars who were injured, in addition to Graham and Hinnant, were Thomas and Ernest Drake, of Wilson, N. C.; Benjamin Miles, of Laurel, and Paul L. Hughes and A. L. Burnett, both of this city. Thomas Drake was brought to Emergency Hospital by the Maryland State police, but his injuries were found to be not serious and he was later released. The other men were treated by Dr. H. Warren, of Laurel, for minor lacerations.

Three Others Injured.

Mrs. Myrtle Wenzel, 21 years old, of 3511 Davenport street northwest, was treated at Georgetown University Hospital for lacerations to the face received when the automobile of her husband, William H. Wenzel, was struck at Thirty-fifth and S streets northwest by a machine operated by Frederick S. Lynes, 39 years old, of Chevy Chase. Her condition is not serious, and she later went to her home.

Lucille Adams, colored, 28 years old, of P street near Fourth northwest, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for abrasions to the forehead, and later arrested on a charge of being drunk, after being struck by an automobile in front of her home. The car was operated by James C. Duncan, of Bates street near First street northwest, according to the police.

Howard Addison, colored, 23 years old, of G street near First southeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for a cut wrist received when he slammed the door of a taxicab at Sixth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. His injury was not serious.

METROPOLITAN

"PARIS." First National-Vitaphone talking-singing-dancing version of the stage play by Martin Brown, with Technicolor sequences, starring Irene Bordoni, supported by Jack Buchanan, Louise Closser Hale and Jason Robards. Directed by Clarence Badger. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL

There are two distinct entertainments, bearing no vital relationship to each other, beyond the fact that both are participated in by the same characters, to be enjoyed here for the single price of admission. The original stage comedy, executed in black and white photography, comprises one; the gorgeous stage revue, in which two of the principals of the love story are the costellar artists, presented in natural colors by the Technicolor process, the other. In the color sequences Irene Bordoni is star by right of performance as well as title; in the unmusicalized movements of the straight comedy, it would not be exaggerating the truth, I think, to say that Louise Closser Hale rather more than threatens to appropriate "Paris" to her own aggrandizement as a character actress and comedienne.

The frothy story by which a number of ludicrous situations, many catchy songs and some sprightly dances are loosely strung together is of no moment. It concerns the infatuation of a strictly reared New England youth for a French musical comedy chanteuse and the fabulous adventures of his Puritanical mother under the Parisian guidance of Vivienne's stage partner, who recognizes the youthful Andrew Sabbot merely as an annoying rival. Miss Hale is the mother, Jason Robards, her son; Jack Buchanan, the actor-guide, and Miss Bordoni, the revue star. The only other roles of importance are those of Andrew's hometown sweetheart, who also follows him to Paris, and Vivienne Rolland's maid, impersonated, respectively, by Margaret Fielding and Zasu Pitts, with the accent on Miss Fielding's role and Miss Pitts' work.

Miss Bordoni's portrayal is a vivacious one and her songs, many with lyrics that are more than a little risque, score as emphatically as any ever sung upon the stage, but something of the insouciance and sparkle that played so large a part in establishing her popularity on the boards has been surrendered to the encroachments of time and increasing embonpoint's impeding impost. I mean to say Miss Bordoni is getting fat. In the natural color revue scenes, with a background of imposing grandeur thickly peopled with beautiful girls, she is, nevertheless, still a gorgeous and enlivening figure. Her costumes beggar description.

Louise Closser Hale scores by the sheer skill of her assumption of qualities seldom associated with Puritanism. More comedy is derived from her characterization alone than from all other sources in the play combined. Jack Buchanan impresses this typewriter as an English Sam Hardy to whose capabilities have been added the purely pedal matter of cleverness as a tap dancer. The mingling of his typically British accent with Miss Bordoni's excited French in a Paris production seems at times a trifle outre. Mr. Robards finds himself in an unfortunate role.

Massive as the color scenes are, they seemed to me inferior to those in "On With the Show" and "The Gold Diggers of Broadway" both in spectacular effect and sharp definition of colors. The recording is uniformly excellent.

The supplementary features include Helen Yorke and Virginia Johnson, appearing in person at another theater this week, in "Crinoline Classics" in which they lend their splendid voices to "When Dreams Come True," "Song of Songs" and their remarkable operatic transcription of the "St. Louis Blues;" an exceptionally interesting composite newsreel, both silent and sound, and a Vitaphone recessional.

RIALTO

"LUCK IN LOVE." Pathe talking and singing picture, featuring Morton Downey, tenor, and Betty Lawford. Directed by Kenneth Webb. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by C. Ransom.

Another of those golden-voiced Irish lads returns in a confident endeavor to carry forward into the field of the talkies the tradition engendered on the stage by a long line of warblers including Chauncey Olcott and Fiske O'Hara. It must be admitted at the start that vocally he is well in the lead of his predecessors. This Downey boy was born with a voice and has learned how to use it. Urobably a more musical observer could tell just wherein he falls short of operatic stature, or maybe he doesn't. What whim of personal taste or what vision of profit has led him to choose the present simple medium is a matter for guessing.

The old formula doesn't seem to fit very handily to the screen. It calls for a primitive melodramatic tale in which Irish landlords and peasants stir about comically or pathetically amid the trials of lovers and the wiles of the villain, an easy, irresponsible movement that halts now and then for a bit of song. There is something about the talking screen that cries more sternly for realism than painted scenery did. The cheerful absurdities of plot in "Lucky in Love," with its romance of Michael O'Moore, the stable boy, and Lady Mary Cardigan, his master's grand-daughter, stand out a little too foolishly for comfort. This is all the more apparent because of the director's efforts to impart reality to detail. A doubt may be ventured whether this kind of entertainment is going to prove as popular as it once did on the stage.

Even a cast of players far superior to any that the old-time Irish stage singer could command, or thought necessary, is not sufficient to make the film acceptable to screen audiences. Betty Lawford is a charming heroine, and there are a dozen well-handled characters, with as sterling a player as John T. Kerrigan in only a minor bit. The scene shifts between the Irish castle and New York, and one of the best-played parts is that of Feinberg, the benevolent head of a department store, who provides jobs for the roving Michael and his sweetheart.

Morton Downey himself acts well as the lucky Irish lad, besides singing so gorgeously. It might be wished he sang oftener and more songs. In the ache for a theme song he repeats one number twice or thrice, and altogether his voice is heard on no more than a half dozen occasions.

A Mack Sennett talking comedy called "A Hollywood Star" has the praiseworthy intent of satirizing the vanity of film fame, and contains many clever and amusing touches. Another short film is one of Lyman Howe's "hodge-podges," which have always been uneven in merit and have not benefited by the addition of sound. A newsreel completes the program.

COLUMBIA

"THE VIRGINIAN." Paramount all-talking screen version of novel by Owen Wister, featuring Gary Cooper, Mary Brian, Walter Huston and Richard Arlen. Directed by Victor Fleming. Reviewed (second week) Sunday night by J. F. Brady.

"The Virginian," a melodrama with wholesome comedy, of Western life back in the old days of gun play, cattle rustling and drink, is good entertainment for the most exacting.

There is much about "The Virginian" to distinguish it. It is practically an all-outdoor talkie, with perfect reproduction throughout. There is the stirring incident between the woman born and reared in the West, thoroughly inoculated with the method of law thereabouts, and the young miss brought from the East to teach the children of the West. And then there are the mammoth scenes of the cattle rustling, down through the stream and out to the camp; the arrival of the "teacher" and the big celebration, as well as the stirring scenes of giving the order to "hang your best friend."

"The Virginian" provides a good vehicle for Mary Brian, and through the many exacting episodes she appears to advantage. Gary Cooper is excellent, his drawl seems perfect and his strict adherence to duty done with exactness. Richard Arlen and Walter Huston, as well as a large supporting cast, add much to the effectiveness of the picture.

Wonderful Western scenery, good acting, fine voice projection and a good story make "The Virginian" worthy of becoming a favorite.

FOX

"SONG OF LOVE." Columbia Pictures talking and singing picture, starring Belle Baker, supported by Ralph Graves and David Durand. Directed by Eric C. Kenton. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

The trilogy is now complete. To "The Dance of Life" and "Big Time" is added Columbia's production of "The Song of Love" to make the third of the season's dialogue and song dramas dealing with the backstage vicissitudes of vaudeville family acts. Hal Skelly and Nancy Carroll costarred in the first, Lee Tracy walked off the with the second and Belle Baker makes her screen debut in the last of the three, although I should hesitate to say that it is any more her picture than it is Ralph Graves', or as much hers as it is little David Durand's. He dangerously near steals the show.

The development of the drama revolves about these three. We see them first as an act—Anna Gibson headlining in vaudeville, with her husband, Tom, at the piano and her little son, Buddy, singing from a stage box. It comes to her finally that the lad is entitled to his boyhood, education and a chance in life, so she retires and Tom teams with Maizie, a blonde from a "girl act" that folds up on the road. It is this circumstance that throws the domestic bark upon the rocks, starts Tom on the toboggan and brings anguish to the heart of the youngster when he learns of it while vacationing from military school. It is through him that the "three musketeers" are reunited.

Belle Baker finds opportunity here to be a sort of female Al Jolson, singing her way through a mother role heavily burdened with disappointment and pathos, just as he did the daddy in "The Singing Fool." Her large vaudeville following will find Miss Baker's songs no less worthy of her talents than those she has sung on the stage, but they may be a trifle disconcerted to hear how stridently her voice comes through the projector. It seemed to me thoroughly unmusical in all but the pianissimo tones, although recorded with perfect clarity and an abundance of strength. Her songs are numerous and are interwoven with the plot in a wholly logical—in fact, essential—manner. They are the play's motivation, especially "Take Everything Away But You," which is considerably overplugged during the course of the action.

Ralph Graves improves tremendously in each successive role. There was a time when he rated pretty much the dud, but as Tom Gibson he offers an intelligent, workmanlike and completely believable performance. And this little Durand fellow crowds him as closely as he does Miss Baker. Rarely has a youngster of seven or eight, as he seems to be, so sure a command of enunciation, pronunciation and tempo as he displays. The only others of note in the cast are Arthur Housman, a "Scotch acrobat," always borrowing make-up, and Eunice Quedens, a newcomer so far as this reporter is concerned, as the blonde menace.

Fanchon and Marco's "Beacn Nights" revue was put on in such a lackadaisical manner yesterday afternoon that it was difficult to estimate what it might be like whipped up to the pace at which it ought to travel. An apathetic audience was partially to blame, inspiring many acidulent comments from Mr. Brusiloff, conducting the stage orchestra, and Mr. Fisher, serving as emasculator of ceremonies. Maxine Doyle, suntanned songster and dancer, Davis and LaRue, eccentric dancing specialists; Art Hadley—announced as Roy on the screen—lightning cartoonist; an unidentified team of ballroom dancers and the Kitaros, Japanese foot jugglers, comprised the list of principals, with the Sunkist Beauties supporting. Mr. Scott, of the orchestra, also played "Asleep in the Deep" on a Gargantuan instrument that looked like a saxophone that had decided to be a double bass tuba—tartophone, I think the man said.

The Fox Movietone News and a colorful overture, consisting of selections from Bizet's "Carmen," are by no means negligible. N. B. B.

"THE GIRL FROM WOOLWORTH'S." A First National talking, singing and dancing production, starring Alice White, supported by Charles Delaney, under the direction of William Beaudine. Reviewed Sunday night by Mary Porter Russell.

The throngs waiting in line at Stanley-Crandall's Thirteenth street house last night seemed to indicate that First National was exceedingly wise in making Alice White a star. It was wise from a box office standpoint. There can be no doubt of that. Some few of us will always contend that pretty knees, rather remarkable eyes and an affected, pert cuteness are not enough to justify stardom, but then, after all, maybe the minority can be wrong.

There is a particular reason, too, at this period of the motion picture, for the popularity of a girl of Miss White's type. As long as the craze continues for stories featuring slangy little shop girls, with Broadway ambitions, there will be a demand for players who can be themselves in such parts. Those who can fit into them through the process of acting are too rare.

Behind the music counter of a ten-cent store, where she is stationed in the present offering, Miss White is ideally cast. There is peppiness and a certain piquancy about her when she sings—though her voice, like her dancing, is far from notable—and there is, too, a game of bravado that many find admirable. She is likewise in her element when the course of the scenario leads her into a glorified night-club setting, where she wears costumes to perfection, sings and dances when her heart is breaking, and nobly repulses the advances of the powerful owner of the club, while the strong young subway guard whom she loves, and who wasn't really injured as she thought when her heart was breaking, rushes to her rescue. "Someone" is the song she sings at the sad moments.

The tale is presented with considerable sprightliness and the cabaret numbers are well staged. Wheeler Oakman brings one of his suave, typical performances to the role of the proprietor, and Charles Delaney is satisfactory as the subway guard who can punch noses.

The subsidiary attractions are numerous and varied. Vitaphone Varieties presents "The Barber Shop Chord," showing what happens when the place men get their beauty treatments turns musical. "Oh, Oh, What I Know About Love," one of Miss White's prominent numbers, is here repeated in what some may think more pleasing style. Johnny Arthur is starred in a talking comedy entitled "Stimulation," and Frank Davis talks his way to audience approval in "A Smooth Guy." The newsreel shows the returning Tunney and his bride.

"Pique Dame," by Suppe, is the overture, and it is beautifully rendered by the house orchestra.

PALACE

"THE KISS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer silent picture with synchronized accompaniment, adapted by Hans Kraly from a story by George M. Saville, with Greta Garbo starred, supported by Conrad Nagel. Directed by Jacques Feyder. Reviewed Saturday night.

If this is the only material that remains from which silent pictures may be compounded for her use, perhaps it is all for the best that Greta Garbo's next release is to be an all-talkie. "The Kiss," despite the effort of Mons. Feyder to obscure it with bizarre modernistic settings and occasional resort to odd angle photography, is cheap and tawdry stuff. The story is that of the domestic triangle almost at its worst—a young girl involved in a loveless marriage with an elderly, jealous husband; a youngster whom her husband beats so unmercifully that he loses his life at the hands of his wife; defense by the unknown lover, acquittal and the customary embrace for the fade-out.

If ever there was a picture that needed dialogue to sustain it, I should say that this is it. Even the court scene is there, figuratively crying aloud for a voice!

There really isn't much that a cast can do with this sort of thing. Miss Garbo, in the role of the wife, exerts her usual baffling fascination, despite her hats, which, at times, lend her face almost the grotesquery of a Benda mask. There is no time where her portrayal strikes fire. The trial scene, the climacteric sequence of the picture, creates something of suspense but still leaves an audience as cold as Miss Garbo's own demeanor in her hour of tribulation. Conrad Nagel, as the young attorney in love with his client, does sufficiently well with the bits that fall to his lot, as may be said also of Anders Randolf, the target for his wife's bullet; Holmes Herbert, father of the youth so piteously beaten by Guarry, and Lew Ayres, as Pierre, that hapless youth.

The surrounding bill, by its variety and merit, largely atones for the mediocre quality of the major feature. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy have one of the funniest of their all-talking comedies in "A Perfect Day," in which they take "the little women" and gouty, old Uncle Ed out on a picnic in the family Model T. Eventually they get as far as the corner, which ought to be all you need to know. The Hearst Metrotone News completes the screen portion of the pastiming.

On the stage the Palace Fall Festival presents a variegated entertainment in which a succession of pretentious scenes compels the orchestra to remain in the pit and permits Allan Rogers, the new master of ceremonies, to appear only long enough to sing "Sweet Mystery of Life," by Victor Herbert; "I'm a Dreamer" and "Just You, Just Me," movie theme songs, and "Rose Marie," from the operetta in which he formerly appeared. The group won no less than an ovation. And deserved it.

Others contributing to a revue that stresses music and spectacle rather than comedy include Helen Yorke and Virginia Johnson, also being featured elsewhere on Vitaphone this week, in "The Wedding of the Painted Doll" and their operatic arrangement of the "St. Louis Blues," which then is converted into an ensemble number and interpreted as it might have been if composed by Bizet, Victor Herbert or George Gerswin; A. Robins, an eccentric musical comedian with trick costumes and the same kind of a voice, familiar to former patrons of vaudeville; Vivian Fay, a gifted and charming toe dancer, and the Stone-Vernon Foursome, adagio dancers extraordinary, comprised of three men and a girl who evidently values her life at about a nickel.

The orchestra offers a melange of popular tunes as a well-played and rather more elaborate overture than usual. The program is completed by Charles Gaige's organ interludes. N. B. B.

"JAZZ HEAVEN." A Radio talking-singing picture, directed by Melville Brown and featuring Sally O'Neil, John Mack Brown, Joseph Cawthorn, Albert Conti and Clyde Cook. Reviewed Saturday night by Mary Porter Russell.
